Baseball Czar Landis Escapes When Wind Storm Hits Ball Park—Wide-spread Property Damage Caused By Wind

NORFOLK, Va., May 26.—Seven persons were dead today and widespread property damage caused by a sudden tornado-like gale which whipped up suddenly late yesterday and destroyed part of the Norfolk ball park, where the Norfolk and Portsmouth teams were playing.

Judge Keneasaw Mountain Landis, in the ball park at the time, had a narrow escape. He said it was the worst storm he had ever seen.

WILE SAYS:

Air Mail Happy Will Roy Blow? Honor Bingham Washington Notes

By FREDERICK WILLIAM WILE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Lindbergh's thrilling feat arouses nowhere more joyful enthusiasm than in the United States Air Mail Service, for it was there that he served his flying apprenticeship. Flying with the mails is, of course, not accompanied by the dangers or risks necessary in training men for military and naval aviation. But the air mail does call for a degree of precision, care and conservatism that "Lucky" Lindbergh put into triumphant practice in preparing for and accomplishing his epoch-making hop across the Atlantic. W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general, in charge of the air mail service, proudly calls attention to its most recent achievements. For that portion of the fiscal year 1927 from July 1, 1926 to April 22, 1927 postal pilots flew a total of 2,158,023 miles. On the date last flown, one of its gallant airmen, Jack Milazzo, his death marked the highest average of miles flown per fatal crash since the inauguration of the air mail. How the service has grown is indicated by the fact that in the fiscal year 1918 only 21,339 miles were flown, while in 1926, 2,158,023 miles were flown. The Post Office Department since 1918 has had only $12,885,000 of appropriations for the air mail, and out of that it has an inventory (value of equipment) of more than $2,000,000.

RAGING WATERS LAP AT FINAL DRY SPOT IN LOUISIANA AREA

Thousands Are Being Sheltered Now At Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La., May 26.—After three days devoted to perfecting organization of the reconstruction machinery in Mississippi and Arkansas, Secretary of Commerce Hoover returned to Louisiana relief headquarters today to assume direction of the refugee concentration from the rapidly disappearing parishes of Point Coupee and West Baton Rouge.

Boats of every description bringing hundreds of flood exiles hourly to the Red Cross and national guard camps here since the opening of the East Atchafalaya Crevass at McCrea last Saturday have made the state capital one of the largest concentration points in the flooded area of the lower valley.

More than 6,000 homeless were camped here when Secretary Hoover arrived this morning from Little Rock. Preparations have been made for a minimum of 10,000 refugees in the Baton Rouge area. Between 4,000 and 6,000 will be cared for in the picturesque surroundings of old university campus, a mile north of the state house. Army tents for about 5,000 more are spread in a city park a mile to the west.

Waters sweeping down the Pointe Coupee peninsula from the McCrea break had reached the northern boundary of West Baton Rouge parish. The last dry spot in the 200 mile stretch of Central Louisiana between the Mississippi and the western edge of the fifty mile inland sea smothering some 8,000 square miles of the state from the Arkansas border to the Gulf of Mexico.

STUDENTS DROWN

CINCINNATI, O., May 26.—George Adams, 20, of Paris, Ky., and Roland Sellers, 23, of Kendallville, Ind., students at St. Gregory's seminary here, were drowned when their canoe overturned in Little Miami River, while they were attending the annual picnic of the school at Friars' camp, near here.

PILOT'S RECEPTION GROWS

FRENCH WELCOME IS BEING EXTENDED TO ALL UNITED STATES

Pilot Received By Foch And Joffre—Gives Prize Back

PARIS, May 26.—The French welcome for Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, first to succeed in a New York to Paris flight, has gradually developed until today it has taken the aspects of a pro-American demonstration.

Lindbergh's modest and thoughtful conduct has done much to increase the French respect for Americans, and whereas a few days ago Americans in Paris were often times subject to leers and jeers, today they are treated in most friendly fashion. The one continuous demonstration and jubilation over Lindbergh's success is reaching a climax today, for it is Ascension Day and thousands of workers who have heretofore been unable to greet Lindbergh are having a holiday and are preparing to line the Champs Elysee and Rue de Rivoli to see his triumphal procession to the city hall where he will be given the keys of the city.

Lindbergh will ride through the streets in an open carriage, escorted by the president of the municipal council and Ambassador Herick, with a troop of French cavalry, brilliant in dress uniforms, clattering along as an escort. Five hundred invitations have been issued for the city hall reception, but there has been a demand for hundreds more and the police anticipate huge crowds.

During the morning hours crowds gathered about the American embassy, hoping to catch a glimpse of the young aviator who has overnight become an ambassador by circumstance. Frenchmen meeting American friends before the embassy greeted them with congratulations and when ever French enthusiasm reached the point where it had to have expression the "Vive Lindbergh" was often times accompanied by "Vive L'Amerique."

At noon Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, will entertain Lindbergh with an official luncheon, at which it is expected the majority of the cabinet will be present.

Perhaps the most gracious act Lindbergh has accomplished and which has won for him even greater admiration has been his gift of 150,000 francs for a fund for the families of French aviators who have lost their lives in the promotion of the science of flying. The 150,000 francs was awarded to Lindbergh by the Aero Club of France, having been donated by Mme. Deutsche De La Meurthe for the purchase of a cup. Lindbergh promptly turned the money back, stating that he greatly appreciated the honor extended him but that it was his desire that the money be paid into the fund for the relief of those who have given their sons and husbands to the science of aviation.

Punctuality is inscribed heavily in the lexicon of this youth, for at 10:10 this morning, the appointed hour, he arrived at the home of Marshal Foch to pay his respects. Lindbergh was warmly greeted by Foch and the entire Foch family. Marshal Foch wore his American distinguished service medal in honor of the occasion.

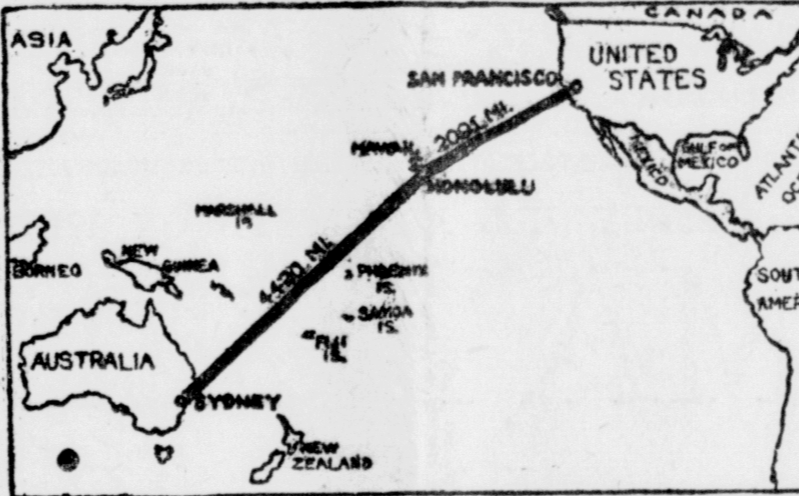

"I congratulate you for having shown what a young man can accomplish when he organizes well what he sets out to do," said Marshal Foch.

NEW FORD MORE EXPENSIVE BUT MORE ECONOMICAL TO OPERATE

DETROIT, May 26.—Official announcement was made today of the early production of the long expected new light car designed by Henry Ford.

Exclusive news of the forthcoming new model was carried by the International News Service several weeks ago.

While specifications for the new car were not announced, the company's announcement stated that it has "speed, style, flexibility and control in traffic."

"With the new Ford we propose to continue in the light car field which we created on the same basis of quantity production we have always worked, giving high quality, low price and constant service," the announcement says.

A complete description of the new model will be given within the next few weeks, it was stated. The company will continue to manufacture parts for the present Model T, the announcement continues.

KING GEORGE WILL RECEIVE "SLIM"

LONDON, May 25.—King George will receive Captain Charles A. Lindbergh in audience on Monday, it was announced officially today.

The King's reception is expected to be informal and it is believed that the Prince of Wales will be present and the American youth will be invited to join with the monarch in an informal chat about aviation.

London is preparing to make Lindbergh's visit a gala occasion.

WILL OFFER PRIZE FOR HAWAII FLIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—James D. Dole, millionaire Hawaiian "pineapple king" today offered a prize of $25,000 to the first aviator to make a non-stop flight from the Pacific Coast to Hawaii.

A prize of $10,000 was also offered to the second aviator to make the hop.

MANY PASSENGERS ENDANGERED WHEN VESSEL IS RAMMED

Steamer In Accident On Test Voyage Towed By Tugs

BOSTON, May 26.—Radio messages picked up here today stated that the disabled new San Francisco steamer, Malolo with 310 persons aboard was anchored fifteen miles west-southwest of Nantucket lightship with wrecking tugs prepared to tow her to New York.

The freight steamer Jacob Christensen, which crashed into the Malolo late yesterday in a fog, was reported approaching New York.

The coastguard cutter Shaw, a steam trawler and several other vessels were standing by the Malolo, which was enveloped in a heavy fog.

Temporary repairs had been made on the palatial new $7,000,000 Pacific coast liner which was on her trial run and all aboard were reported safe.

The Malolo's wireless operator stated that the giant liner had a hole punctured over the fire room and that two of her engines were disabled. Firemen had been standing in four feet of water.

The Christensen, a Norwegian freighter, with a punctured bow, proceeded to New York under her own steam, with the steamer Fisher as escort.

The Malolo's wireless operator stated that the steamer "No assistance needed." Tugs were near to tow her to New York. The Malolo was anchored in latitude 40.29 north; longitude 70.13 west.

Several wealthy and prominent men from New York and Philadelphia were guests aboard the Malolo.

The Jacob Christensen may go direct to Philadelphia instead of carrying out her commander's plans to put into New York. Her wireless operator could not be reached this forenoon.

The liners President Roosevelt and Rotterdam were in close touch with the Malolo. The tanker Gulf liner side and a small fleet of other rescue craft was standing off. The fog was lifting.

HOLLAND DELEGATE "FALLS" FOR FRAUD

DETROIT, May 26.—J. H. Kann, The Hague, Holland, a delegate to the National Foreign Trade Council, is out $135 today because he matched pennies with two strangers.

During the game one of the strangers suggested he hold both of the other players money to assure each a fair deal.

Kann agreed. The strangers fled, going in opposite directions.

VOLUNTARY WORKS PRISONER TURNS DOWN $30,000 TO $40,000 LEGACY

CLEVELAND, O., May 26.—"I'm for vagrancy. He liked it and when his time expired, requested the superintendent to let him stay as a 'volunteer,'" declared George Schmidbauer, 62, voluntary prisoner at Warrensville workhouse, who turned down a legacy of between $30,000 and $40,000, proceeds from the sale of land which he inherited ten years ago.

Last July, George, was sentenced to sixty days in the workhouse.

mean I am a prohibitionist. I would not want to try to tell others what they should and should not drink."

When given a reception by Stephen Lausanne, famous French editor, the young flyer was asked what he would have to drink, champagne or orangeade.

"If you do not mind, I will take orangeade. I feel thirsty," replied Lindbergh and he drank three glasses.

Even though Lindbergh has not paid tribute to the French wines he has certainly indulged in French pastries. The young man has a sweet tooth that has attracted much attention in Paris.

DOCUMENTS SEIZED FROM SOVIET HOUSE BEING MADE KNOWN

Letters Concerning Activities Here Are Found In Raid

LONDON, May 26.—The British government today issued a white paper containing sixteen documents seized in Soviet house, which the foreign office stated illustrate the "hostile activities of the Soviet government and the Third International against Great Britain."

The white paper was the first shot fired in the campaign for ratification of the cabinet decision for a rupture with Russia, which is being fought out in the house of commons today.

Included in the white paper was a list of "illegal addresses for communication with the Communist parties in America, Mexico, South America, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, which were found in the possession of Anton Miller, who resisted the police when they sought to take possession of his dispatch box."

Among other documents published in the white paper was a letter from M. Juskevich, secretary of the revolutionary leather workers international committee, addressed to Comrade Bixby of the workers party of the United States, New York, acknowledging Bixby's letter accepting "mandate as a member of the international committee of propaganda and action of revolutionary workers."

Juskevich instructed Bixby to render a monthly report on "the position of the left wing movement among the workers in the leather boot, shoe, saddle and glove making trades."

"You, Comrade Bixby," said the letter, "will receive our information, letters, material and notification on decisions of outstanding questions which you will have to have to illuminate and popularize as far as possible and put into effect in America."

Juskevich expressed approval of the decisions of the left wing conference of the boot and shoe workers held in Boston and offered congratulations on the plan to publish a paper known as "The Progressive Shoe Worker."

Juskevich said he was interested in the establishment of the "Ord system" in the American boot and shoe industry and asked for information.

DOOLITTLE PILOTS PLANE IN "OUTSIDE LOOP" FIRST TIME

Heretofore Termed Impossible—Under Care Of Physician

DAYTON, O., May 26.—Lt. Jimmy Doolittle, army air service veteran and Schneider trophy holder, today is being hailed in aviation circles as the first pilot to accomplish the outside loop, a feat which heretofore has been termed "impossible."

While the outside loop was negotiated here at McCook Field Tuesday under the observance of Lt. J. T. Hutchinson and five field officers, news of the loop was only learned last night when inquiries were made into the physical condition of the air officer who has been under the care of a physician since his feat.

The loop, according to T. C. McMahon, head of the technical data division of McCook Field, was begun by Doolittle at an altitude of 8,000 feet. The downward arc of the loop was begun and Doolittle attained a speed of 280 miles per hour. At 2,000 feet from the earth the lower arc was successfully negotiated, the pilot still maintaining his outside position while his ship climbed the completing arc and slowed to 150 miles per hour.

The outside loop differs from the ordinary loop, in that the procedure is reversed, and the ship instead of depending upon centrifugal force for its momentum must by the power of its motor combat this force. In the ordinary loop, the airman pilots his ship so that he is always within the loop his machine described, while in the outside loop the pilot is without the described arc.

Doolittle used a Curtiss pursuit plane in his successful achievement.

According to physicians he was subject to hemorrhage of the lungs when he brought his plane to earth and his eyes were bloodshot.

Doolittle is one of the few airmen who have crossed the Andes mountains by air, and in the infancy of aviation made a one stop flight from Jacksonville, Fla., to San Diego, Cal.

After defeating several navy fliers in the 1925 Schneider trophy race at Baltimore when he attained a speed of 232 1/2 miles, Doolittle was given an honorary title of "admiral."

ASKS DELEGATES TO EXPLAIN REPORTS

WASHINGTON, May 26.—American delegates to the international economic conference at Geneva have been asked for an "explanation" of the reported conversations with Russian delegates there over trade agreements and similar matters, it was learned here today.

Secretary of State Kellogg is somewhat perturbed over the press reports that have been cabled from Geneva telling of the conversations. He wants to avoid any impression that there is anything "official" being arranged between the two governments.

The American delegation at Geneva is headed by Henry R. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, and includes business experts from various government departments.

FOLLOW NEW CLEW IN SEEKING PLANE

Collins said that he did not know until recently that Nungesser's plane was missing. Earlier reports had been received of a plane being heard near Swift Current on the morning of May 9.

"Lucky" Lindbergh, Paris Jumper, Made Caterpillar Club Four Times

By JOHN LEO COONTZ

WASHINGTON, May 26.—"Lucky" Lindbergh, bashful six-foot Columbus of the air, who is very much in the public eye at present since flying alone from New York to Paris, has another record to his credit.

This record is little known and is incidental to membership in one of the most exclusive clubs on earth, the Caterpillar Club. For Lindbergh, despite his youthful appearance, has a thrilling record behind him. His more formal title is Charles A. Lindbergh, captain in the United States army air corps.

The Caterpillar Club is five years old. It has only forty-six members and each of the forty-six must have survived an aerial catastrophe to become a member. In other words it is composed of men who have been compelled to abandon an airplane in midair and resort to the parachute to save their lives.

Captain Lindbergh is the star member because he has performed this feat four times. That is why he is called "Lucky." Lieutenant Hunter, of the army air corps, and Eugene H. Barkdale, who approached Lindbergh's record most closely, have two jumps each to their credit.

One lone woman, Mrs. Irene McFarland, a civilian flier, has the distinction of being a Caterpillar. She leaped from her disintegrating plane at Cincinnati in July, 1925.

The origin of the Caterpillar club is shrouded in mystery. It is an interesting light on human perversity that such a club, composed of men who fly above the earth should be named after an insect which crawls upon its surface. One explanation given is that caterpillars produce the silk from which the parachutes are made. Very much like Topsy, the club sprang up almost overnight.

It originated about the time when Lieutenant Harold R. Harris made his famous jump from the air in 1922. The records of the club in the office of the Army Air Corps at Washington indicate the members of the newspaper profession and of the parachute unit.

A club he formed, composed only of men whose lives had been saved by a parachute in a forced abandonment of their planes. The suggestion was adopted under the proposed restrictions. Daredavils who purposely drop from planes are not admitted, and members can become so only through accident. The club is not an organization. It has neither officers, constitution, nor by-laws. As it stands today it consists simply of data collected on emergency jumps with a short sketch of the circumstances and a picture of the jumper. These are mounted in the "Caterpillar Club" album. No other formality exists.

The only emblem so far suggested is a drawing of a caterpillar made by a Dayton painter on the frame of the Caterpillar club display board at McCook Field. Re-

at McCook Field, Dayton, O., claim responsibility for its birth. The clearest story, according to the records, is that the club started with a discussion among two Dayton newspaper men, Morris Hutton, a reporter, and Verne Timmerman, a photographer, both later killed in a plane crash, and M. H. St. Clair of the parachute unit.

It was at the time of Harris' successful jump from a plane which was falling to pieces beneath him. The discussion turned to the future success of the parachute in lessening the dangers of the sky pilot and the suggestion was made that a club be formed, composed only of men whose lives had been saved by a parachute in a forced abandonment of their planes.

Faulty Elimination

Should Be Corrected—Good Elimination Is Essential to Good Health.

If you would be well, see to your elimination. Faulty kidney action permits toxic material to remain in the blood and upset the whole system. Then, one is apt to have a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, a toxic backache or headache, and often some irregularity of secretions, such as scanty or burning passages. More and more people are acclaiming the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, in this condition. For more than forty years, Doan's have been winning favor the country over. Ask your neighbor!

cently a Buffalo parachute firm has sent gold pins with a caterpillar design to individuals whose lives have been saved with parachutes of their manufacture. The air corps is also said to have in mind an official insignia consisting of a caterpillar mounted on a mulberry leaf. It would necessarily take the form of a ring, since there is no authority for officers in the service to wear such ornaments upon their uniforms.

Present members of the club are divided between the air corps, with thirty-two; the navy, with two; marine corps, three; commercial, five; and the air mail, four.

The most spectacular, possibly, of all jumps, was that of Stephen A. McClellan at Washington. McClellan was flying a plane before the air test board at Bolling field, when, while descending from a height of 4,000 feet with the motors wide open, its wings folded back on him. The unsupported engine, which, when the plane went to pieces, was driving it at a speed of 210 miles an hour, shot earthward like a fiery meteor. McClellan, showing rare presence of mind, fought clear of the wings, wormed his way out of the cockpit, and jumped, his parachute opening as he fell. The engine, fell, blazing, into the Potomac, a great, roaring rocket. McClellan followed it by a few minutes, still retaining sufficient coolness to cut his parachute from him within fifteen feet of the water. He was hauled out of the water laughing, went to the hospital for an examination, and was out and about in a few minutes, feeling none the worse.

Major Dargue, commander of the army good-will expedition to South America, and Lieutenant Whitehead, were forced to jump when the Detroit and New York collided at Buenos Aires. Two pilots were killed in this accident. Available records show that five foreign airmen owe their lives to parachutes. They are Pilot Officer Tantland, Captain E. R. C. Scholefield, Sergeant H. C. Steanes and W. J. Frost of the British air force, and Lieutenant Nils Soderberg of the Royal air force, Sweden.

EXTENSIVE WORK OF

SUNSHINE SOCIETY TOLD

A report of the year's work done by the Sunshine Society, given by Mrs. William Rickels, Jr., was the most interesting feature of the meeting of the society held at the home of Mrs. Henry Norckauer, Hill St., Tuesday afternoon.

Four hundred and twenty-one visits were paid by members of the society to sick persons and "shut-ins" during the year, Mrs. Rickels reported. One hundred and thirty-nine potted plants were given to "shut-ins"; 2,639 magazines and religious literature given out; 300 containers of jellies and dainties, ten dozen eggs, ten chickens, eight-three dresses and aprons, cookies and cakes, and twenty auto rides were enjoyed through the kindness of the society.

NOW A BABY HIPPO! WASHINGTON, May 26.—President Coolidge's private White House menagerie was increased today by a baby hippopotamus—the gift of Harvey S. Firestone, the rubber magnate. The president was advised that the newest addition will arrive on June 1. It is about six feet long and stands about thirty inches. The animal was captured on the Firestone plantation in Liberia. The Liberian hippo prefers dry land to water, the President was advised, and arrangements accordingly have been made for a dry berth for the youngster at the national zoo.

LISBON, May 26.—The schooner Infanta Sagres, which has Commander Francesco De Pinedo aboard and his plane "Santa Maria II" in tow, has not arrived at Horta, the Azores, according to dispatches today. ## BIBLE THOUGHT

THE WAY OF SAFETY.—The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish. Psalm 1:6.

CARRYING CHIVALRY TOO FAR

What with bobbed-haired bandits, lady thugs, feminine forgers, girl go-betweens, and the more deadly variety of husband killers, it might seem that woman-kind, in her new found freedom of the nineteenth amendment, had carried this business of equality with man a shade too far.

Many now admit, though perhaps with a bit of shame, that woman is at times his equal in evil endeavor as well as in good. The charge that womankind is hardened in her emancipation is not without grounds, and the old-fashioned chivalry grows pale and wan.

When a Maryland judge, therefore, frees a woman who pleads guilty to the embezzlement of some $20,000, solely because she is a woman, the happening is so unusual that it is sent hither and yon by telegraphic news service for the people to see and marvel at.

"I come of stock," said the judge in handing down his opinion, "that never believed in punishment of a woman until she should become so depraved that she was dangerous to the public at large."

Here is a gentleman of the old school. Here is chivalry of the kind that flourished when knighthood was at its flowerist. Here is a throwback to the happy philosophy which held all women good women just because they were women. Under its teaching, no woman might ever see the inside of a house of correction unless she became recruited to the ranks of the machine gunners.

It would be pretty, indeed, for the world to turn back once more to a code such as the Maryland judge advocates. His decision is an optimistic note in the symphony of the times—a symphony played largely with the crashing cymbals of pessimism. It is, however, a note doomed to die. Woman has gained her equality with man and as she stands in any court of the land, she must be prepared to take its findings under the same laws and the same codes that mete out justice to men.

STARTING DANGEROUS CUSTOM

When movie camera men took several reels of film at Princess Pola Negri's wedding in Paris the other day, the princess started a fad which may have far reaching effect on marriage customs of the future. Good moving picture cameras can now be obtained at about half the price of an automobile, so, in these opulent days of "two cars to every family," it is not beyond reason that every family with a marriageable girl will be able to sport a movie machine of its own.

Possessing one of these history-recording contraptions will enable one of the kid brothers to film the whole ceremony. In Princess Pola's case, exposures were taken of the bride's pail, the bride's shy blush, the merry villagers dancing on the green, and they even let so unimportant a being as the bridegroom get in on the picture to film the bride's first kiss.

All this offers seed for planting interesting speculation. Granting that the custom of taking home-made movies of every wedding springs into use, think what awful wallops can be delivered to husbandly or wifely self-esteem by hauling these films out of storage ten years or more after the ceremony. Wives who wish to torture their husbands can bring out these reels and show them in front of the neighbors. Husbands who wish to remind their better halves that they are becoming fat and are losing their girlish figures can have their inning of fiendish revenge. Fathers-in-law can be shown how funny they actually did look in spats and a morning coat, and tear-stained mother-in-law can be thrown upon the screen to be laughed at by irreverent grandchildren.

All in all, these reels would become a public menace, and might send even more distraught couples to the already groaning divorce mills. Fortunately, films are inflammable, and in case it should become necessary to destroy this vivid evidence of the one big mistake, it can be destroyed by the application of a good, dry, up-and-coming Swedish, Japanese or American match.

On the other hand, think what fun the public at large might now be having with the six-reel thriller Peggy Hopkins Joyce could have furnished had she but started this wedding film habit in that none too remote past when she first took up marriage as a career and made it her life work.

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C KELLY

SHE WANTED A FUR COAT

In a restaurant last night I heard a pretty girl talk for nearly an hour and a quarter about a fur coat. She was telling her escort about the rare bargain she had found and though he made many futile attempts to change the topic of conversation, she stuck to that fur coat all through the meal. Fragments of her talk that reached my near ear were something like this: "Yes, this friend of mine is going away—cost her $350—wore it less than two months—just imagine, only $150—I do need a fur coat for next fall—don't feel that I can afford it—too wonderful a bargain to miss—"

They had gone to dinner together, presumably, for entirely different reasons. He wanted a certain company, and she earnestly craved that fur coat. Perhaps each went home disappointed. At any rate, he did not take her hint, but responded mostly with polite, non-committal little grunts. She was still talking about the coat when I left the restaurant, but he was still keeping his temper, regardless of how distressed she may have been over the limited range of her table chat. Somehow, though, I couldn't feel much sympathy for the man. Perhaps if she hadn't wanted that fur coat, she wouldn't have gone to dinner with him at all. The truth is that all over the world women are constantly trying to talk men into doing something involving expenditure of money, and this situation has given men an exaggerated idea of their own importance. They think they are clever and superior when they are merely prosperous. Away back, hundreds of years ago, when family life first began, women were unable, for biological reasons, to move about as far or as actively as men did. Thus men had their chance to organize the world to suit themselves. Ever since then men have had greater earning power than women—even when doing the same kind of work. Thus they have had the upper hand and an unfair advantage. Perhaps it is ridiculous that a woman should so frequently obtain what she wants only after flattering some man—treating him as a superior being. Hence, my sympathies were with the little girl in the restaurant. True, her single track conversation wasn't what I would have chosen to listen to all evening. But nevertheless, I hope she finds somebody who will loosen up and buy her that fur coat.

How to Achieve Beauty

EXERCISES FOR RESILIENCY AND FLEXIBILITY OF THE HANDS

Aside from the softness and whiteness of the hands, the self-administered manicure which I have already spoken of this week, you must aim for flexibility and resiliency of the hands and learn the art of using them gracefully, if you really seek hand beauty in all its phases. A hand that is properly cared for and which handles itself properly, can very well stand the test of comparison with the naturally beautiful hand. It is really a beautiful hand and love, in winning friendship and love, is a world of character in a handshake. It can be one of the most magnetic things in life, and then again it can be most repelling. If your hand is warm, resilient and vibrant, you can attract people from the very first meeting. Just consider for a moment the different types of handshakes of people you know and you will appreciate more keenly what I mean.

Hold the hands with the fingers up in front of you and practice an imaginary five-finger exercise. Open and close the hands rhythmically. Hold the arms out in front of you and clasp the hands, dovetailing the fingers so that they come out on the back of the hands. Stretch them and relax. Stretch the fingers of one hand apart with the fingers of the other. After these stretching exercises, shake the hands from the wrist in as loose a manner as possible, until they feel limp all over. This is one of the best exercises I know for relaxing the hands and wrists. Cultivate a graceful pose of the hands when they are relaxed.

Pimples, Boils, Skin Eruptions

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system. This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S. You owe it to yourself to try S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished. It is time-tried and reliable. "I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another. S.S.S. is made from the fresh roots of medicinal herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory. S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical."

Keeping HEALTHY by Dr. A.F. Currier

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS
Interested Reader—Will you discuss the ailment known as multiple sclerosis or hardening of nerve centers, giving cause, symptoms, treatment and possibility of cure?

This is a somewhat rare chronic disease of the brain and spinal cord, the principle evidence of which consists of small, round patches of fibrous tissue disseminated over the surface of the deeper tissues of the brain and spinal cord. It is also characterized by certain, well-marked, among which is trembling or tremor. This comes on when any muscular effort is made, and stops when the effort is completed. Thus, if the purpose of the patient were to lift his hand to his mouth, he might be able to accomplish it, but the hand would be trembling all the way from the point of starting until it reached the mouth and then the trembling would stop. Another characteristic symptom is slow, measured, indistinct speech, and a third is violent and constant oscillation of the eyeballs from side to side, which is called "nystagmus."

Other less constant symptoms are partial withering of the optic nerve with consequent impairment of vision, headache, pain in the eyeballs, dizziness, vomiting, flashes of light before the eyes, apoplexy with rigid spasm of the muscles, partial paralysis from which there may be recovery or which may progress and become complete and permanent. There may also be unusual activity of what are known as the reflexes, in distinction from the paralysis of these reflexes which occurs in certain other diseases of the nervous system, and various disturbances of the sensibility. The patches or plaques, which seem to be the cause of this disease are found in different portions of the brain and spinal cord, and produce pain or paralysis in those parts of the body which are controlled by them, for example, the lower extremities of the muscles which control the action of the bladder and intestine. This disease may come suddenly or gradually, it may exist alone or it may be associated with scarlet fever, syphilis, smallpox or typhoid fever.

Not infrequently it is an occupational disease, occurring from overwork or from injury, but particularly from metallic poisoning by lead, mercury or copper. It may also result from exposure to cold and wet, from dissipation of various kinds and from malarial poisoning. It is a disease of early life, occurring from the twentieth to the fortieth year, but sometimes also in young children.

In some cases there are remissions and apparent recovery. If the exciting cause is removable (as in cases of metallic poisoning or poisoning from alcohol) there may be improvement. Various powerful drugs are used by the neurologists for the relief of the more distressing symptoms, and often with considerable success; but it is not to be expected that these will do more than retard the progress of the disease. Relief is often obtained also by systematic treatment with baths, electricity, massage, and exercise. It is always best, if possible, that such cases be under the care and direction of those who are well informed in regard to nervous diseases.

MRS. P. G. K.: My two-year-old boy is bow legged and not very strong in his legs, though strong elsewhere. I give him fruit, mostly oranges. What can I do to have his legs straightened?

Answer.—He probably has rickets, due to improper food. Give him plenty of rich milk, adding a tablespoonful of lime water to each glass, and plenty of orange juice every day. As soon as possible take him to a good orthopedic surgeon to have proper braces applied to his legs. Now is the very best time to correct this deformity.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

Chorus by Marjorie K. Rawlings
A KITCHEN FACING WEST

I LIKE a kitchen facing West,
For when my day is nearly done
And I'm in need of peace and rest,
I like to see the evening sun.

The morning finds me fresh and gay,
To song and merriment inclined.
Let kitchen then be dark and gray,
I am so blithe, I do not mind.

As hours go by and trials increase,
And as my mind grows tired and dull,
My laughter and my singing cease—
Life does not seem so beautiful.

Then through my westward windowpane
The sun streams in across my floor,
My table, in a golden rain—
And I can smile and sing once more!

JUNIOR BUSINESS MEN GIVE CENTRAL ITS FIRST DEFEAT

Sustaining its first defeat of the season in the Xenia Recreation League, Central High School dropped into a four-cornered tie for first place by losing to the Junior Business Men 15 to 6 in a well-played soft ball game at Cox Memorial Athletic Field, Wednesday afternoon.

The game was a postponed affair from two weeks ago. The business men assumed a six-run lead in the first two innings and put the contest safely away with a nine-run rally in the sixth inning during which "Bull Dog" Smith was knocked out of the box. Doak finished the game on the mound and escaped without being scored upon.

Four teams are now tied for first place, the high school having won a recent game from the Kiwanis Club by forfeit. Rotary, Scouts, Junior Business Men and the high school have each won two games and lost one.

Central lineup: Haversley, 1b; Marshall, 2b; Henrie, 3b; Smita, p-ss; Doak, ss-p; Mattox, cf; Barr, rf; Cramer, lf.

POMONA GRANGE IN MEETING AT SPRING VALLEY WEDNESDAY

Reports of all granges in the county, showing all organizations to be in good condition with increased membership, were given at the meeting of Pomona Grange, at Spring Valley, Wednesday. More than 200 attended the meeting.

Nine candidates were conferred with the fifth degree during the morning business session. Plans were made for the Grange display at the Greene County Fair this year, with a special juvenile booth with prizes for entries.

A basket dinner was served at noon, followed by a program in charge of Mrs. W. C. St. John, chairman of juvenile Grange work. The first number on the program was a "Tom Thumb Wedding" in which twenty-four children, between the ages of three and ten years took part.

A pageant of different countries and nationalities, including fifteen nations was presented by forty boys and girls. A play "How the Story Grew" was presented by Spring Valley juveniles.

Music was furnished by the Spring Valley High School Orchestra, under the direction of W. C. Sayre. Miss Mildred W. Sandoe, district librarian, was present.

Pomona Grange will meet June 24, at night, with Beaver Grange, when fifth degree work will be put on, with a class of between seventy-five and 100.

Babb MEANS Best

The De Laval puts money in the bank

MONEY in the bank is the final test of any piece of farm equipment. It is especially true of a cream separator.

Butter-fat is the most valuable product of the farm. Twice a day, every day in the year, gravity skimming or a poorly constructed separator wastes this high-priced food.

A De Laval Cream Separator stops this loss of profit. It supplies the extra money that is needed for current expenses, improvements about the farm, or for the purchase of new stock.

More than 2,500,000 De Laval are in daily use throughout the world. These De Laval owners represent the most progressive and most prosperous farmers in every county and locality.

A De Laval Cream Separator will make your farm more profitable, too, and put money in the bank for you.

Sooner or Later you will buy a

AUTOISTS ESCAPE INJURY AS TRAIN HITS AUTO AT CROSSING

Russell Anderson, Orient Hill, driving a touring car also occupied by his four-year-old daughter, narrowly escaped serious injury when the auto was struck by eastbound "bobtail" Pennsylvania passenger train, No. 914, at the W. Main St. crossing at 5:40 p. m. Wednesday.

Anderson's attention was attracted by a pedestrian who waved a warning of the train's approach, but did not realize the danger until too late to stop the machine.

The locomotive side-swiped the rear fender of the machine, turned the car partially around and forced it over the sidewalk and into the front yard of the residence of Maurice Welsh, on the south side of the street.

The car was not badly damaged, and neither occupant was hurt. The train was driving east at the time.

The train, eastbound from Dayton, was travelling about fifteen miles an hour. It was in charge of Engineer Allen, Richmond, Ind. The accident was the first since watchmen's gates and bells were removed from that crossing and a flash signal substituted. The change was made Tuesday.

FINED FOR USING WRONG LICENSES

Pleading guilty to a charge of operating an auto bearing licenses issued to another motorist, William Jones, Cedarville and Jamestown Pike, was fined $25 and costs by Mayor E. H. McFarland, Cedarville, Thursday morning.

Jones was arrested Wednesday night by Constable McLean, of Cedarville. Jones is said to have recently purchased an automobile from J. J. Hayslett, Jamestown, and neglected to procure new tags for the car, instead using the plates with which the car was already equipped.

SPEAKER ON CHINA HEARD AT MEETING

John M. Roser, Dayton, described his world travels before a fair sized audience at Knight of Pythias Hall, Wednesday evening.

The meeting was originally scheduled at a Past Chancellor's gathering, the address to take place after the meeting of the organization, but the business part was dispensed with on account of the minority of members.

Mr. Roser told of present-day conditions in China and graphically described foreign lands in which he has traveled. The Dohkie Drill Team of Dayton, staged a drill in front of the Court House before the meeting and repeated the drill at the meeting.

EAST END NEWS

FREQUENT RAINS HINDER CORN CROP; FRUIT DAMAGED BY FROST

Hopes for good crops of corn, fruit and other agricultural produce this year, are shattered by wet weather, according to J. R. Kimber, county extension agent. Continued heavy rains have dampened the spirits of farmers and every cloud in the sky adds to their troubles. With not more than one-third the corn in the ground, hopes for a good crop are being blasted by increased rains. Corn planting has been held up about two weeks on the account of wet weather and will be delayed another week if the rains continue, Mr. Kimber says. The soaked earth has not permitted the corn already planted to grow properly, he said. When planted in the fall, does not seem to have suffered any specially bad effects from the rain and is coming along encouragingly. Continued cold weather and late frosts have spelled ruin to the larger part of the cherry crop and peaches have all been practically killed, according to the extension agent. About half of the cherry crop has been salvaged from the ruin and only a fair crop of early apples will result from the bad weather.

WEDNESDAY HALF-HOLIDAYS WILL BE OBSERVED IN CITY

Xenia business houses will follow the annual custom of Wednesday afternoon holidays during June, July and August merchants are announcing.

The usual custom of circulating a petition among merchants has been abandoned, however, and merchants in each line of business will be expected to reach agreement among themselves.

Jobe Bros., Hutchison and Gihney and The J. C. Penney Co., department stores, and The McDorman-Crawford Co., The Criterion and De Mint's Toggery Shop, clothing stores, have already reached an agreement and will observe the first half-holiday next Wednesday, June 1. Other lines of business are expected to adopt similar agreements and names of merchants involved will be published later.

Merchants say the half-holiday system during the summer is designed especially for clerks whose duties confine them indoors during the hot months, and require them to work each Saturday evening.

The Chew Publishing Co., following its annual custom, will observe the half-holiday plan this year. The Evening Gazette will be issued at noon on Wednesdays during June, July and August.

FORMER RESIDENT OF COUNTY IS DEAD

Word of the death of Harper Peterson, 82, former Greene County, which occurred at his home in Wichita, Kan., Thursday morning, was received by Mrs. John W. Peterson, S. Columbus St., his sister-in-law.

Mr. Peterson was the son of Felix and Mary Weaver Peterson and was the last member of his father's family. He formerly resided in Caesarcreek Twp., and was widely known. He had lived in the west a number of years.

Death was caused by paralysis. He leaves his widow, two sons, Ralph and Harold Peterson of Phoenix, Ariz., and one daughter, Mrs. Garrett Thompson, Indianapolis, Ind.

Burial will be made in Galesburg, Ill.

HANDCAR AND AUTO CRASH; ONE HURT

One man was hurt, when a handcar carrying six men, was struck by the auto driven by Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown, at the Baltimore and Ohio crossing, at the edge of Jamestown, Tuesday night.

Basil Blakely, Jamestown, injured his hip when he fell in jumping from the handcar when the collision was imminent. Neither the occupants of the handcar or Dr. Haines saw one another, they said, because of an obstruction on the crossing. The handcar was derailed but no serious injuries resulted.

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

When the Twins a Trick do Try, Betty Ann Starts to Cry. "Right this way to see the famous magic-eating Congo man! Right this way, fellow Ritzies!" Patsy and Betty Ann, who had been helping Marty find a nice shady place to try out the new bird house, looked up to see Rag, standing in the doorway of the carpenter shop with a black shawl wrapped around him like a magician's robe.

"Step right this way, folks, and see the famous magic-eating Congo man!" Rag called out. "This summons in a deep, powerful voice that sent a creep up the spines of Marty and the two girls."

What were the twins up to now? They had but recently left the yard and Marty and the girls thought they had gone off to play a game of baseball. Naturally they were surprised to find that they had been in the carpenter shop all the time and to see Rag dressed up like a magician, and calling out his peep summons. They moved together towards the carpenter shop door.

Rag ushered them inside with a magnificent bow and pointed to three chairs that had been placed in a row in readiness for them. Stepping back towards the carpenter bench, he made another deep bow and announced, "Bimbo, the famous magic-eating Congo man!"

could expect most anything from Rag and Tag.

The wild "Congo" man waved his hand slowly over the lighted candle, muttering and growling to himself. He suddenly blew out the flame, and to the amazement of his audience, started to eat the candle.

"Stop him, Marty! Stop him!" cried Patsy. But before her brother could interfere, the savage had devoured the entire candle and stood there smiling as if nothing had happened.

"Why, Tag, you'll be sick," said the worried Betty Ann, who had at last found her breath. Then antics of the twins were almost too much for this timid member of the Ritzie club.

"Sick, nothin'," answered Rag, jauntily.

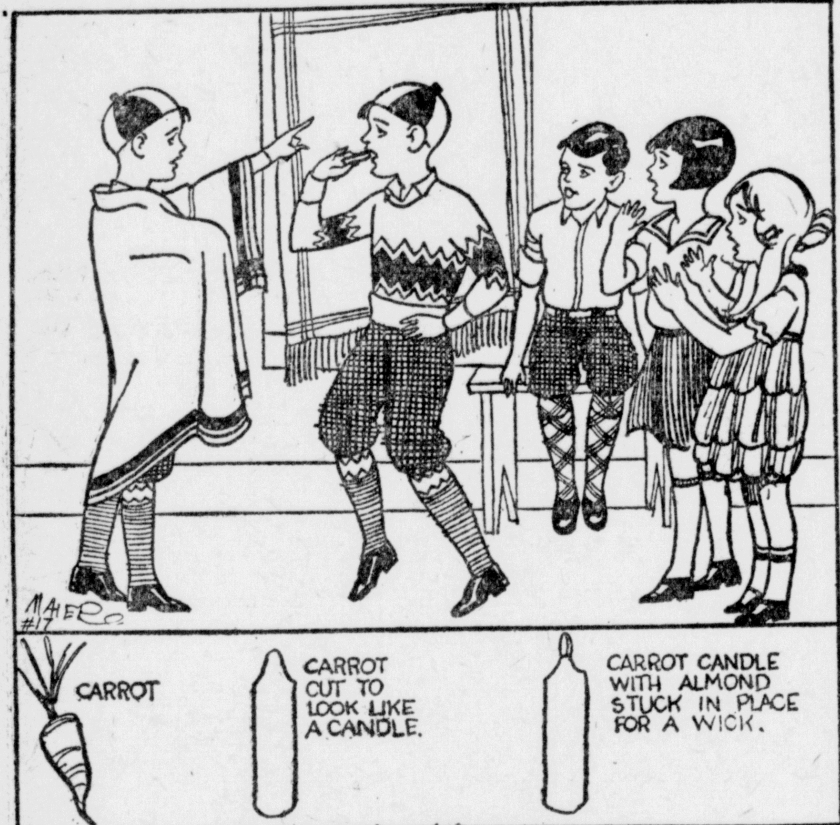

"A candle a day will keep the doctor away!"

"That's an apple," corrected Patsy. "I know you will be sick! Didn't it taste terrible? You didn't even make a face."

Marty wasn't to be taken in as easily as the girls. "Come on, fellows, tell us the trick," he said.

The twins hesitated for a minute, but finding their secret too good to keep, explained the details of their little performance to their fellow club members.

Of course the costumes had been easy. Rag had found an old shawl

As he did so, a ragged creature with a black face jumped from behind the carpenter bench.

Betty Ann screamed and Patsy uttered her brother, but they were quickly quieted when Marty whispered that it was only Tag dressed up.

The "Congo" man ran about in circles all the while mumbling and muttering to himself and screwing up his black features into all kinds of ugly positions.

Suddenly he stopped his savage dance and stood perfectly still in front of his audience. The black-cloaked magician stepped up and handed him a pink candle, scratched a match and lighted the candle wick.

Things were certainly getting creepy. A shawl or something had been placed over the carpenter shop window so that the light was very dim. Marty and the girls huddled closer together as they watched the movements of the black-cloaked magician and the ugly savage. Of course they knew that they were the twins, but you

In the costume barrel and Tag had torn and old shirt and outgrown pair of overalls into ragged strips and blacked his face with burnt cork.

They had made the candle by cutting down a carrot and inserting a thin strip of a skinned almond as a wick. The oil in the almond burned and flared up like a regular candle flame. Of course there was no trick to eating a raw carrot.

The explanation made things so simple that Marty and the girls could hardly believe they had been so mystified.

"If you'll put on that act, we can really have the circus we've been planning," said Marty.

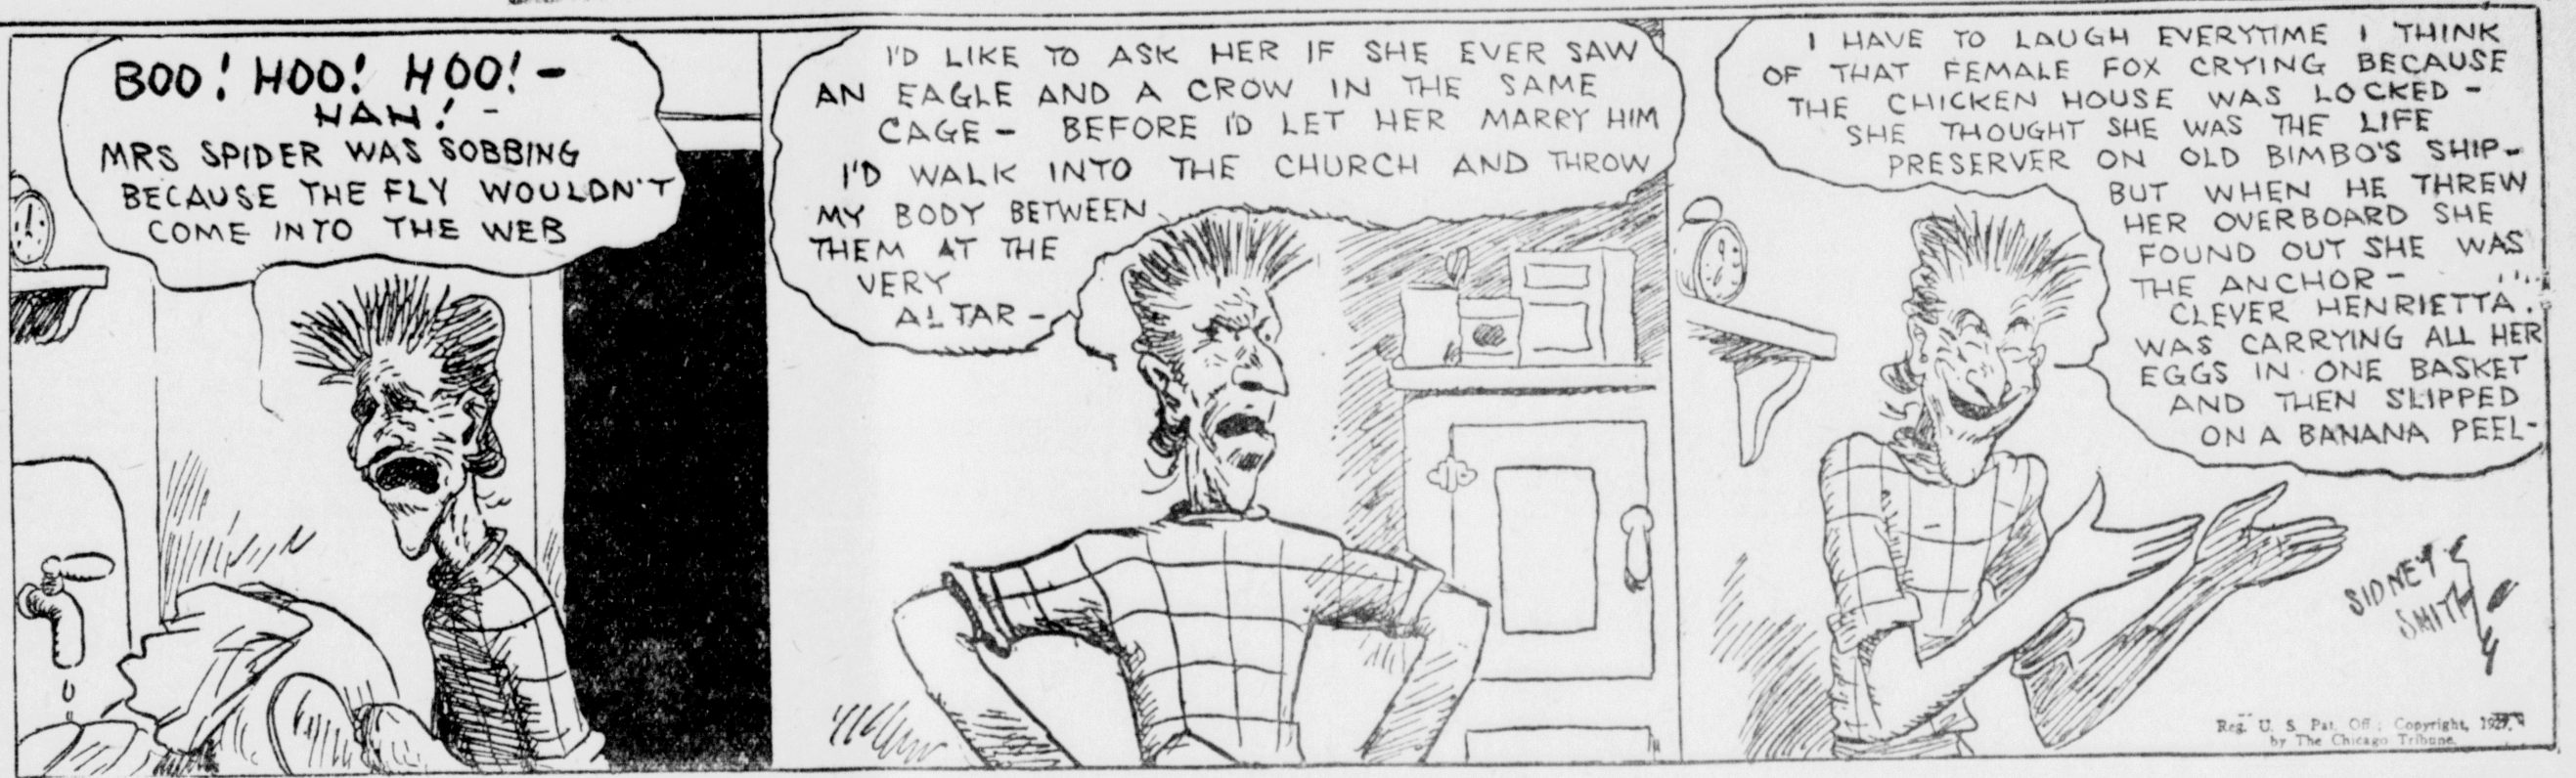

"Hurrah!" cried the twins. "Let's hat it Saturday afternoon."

Tomorrow the Ritzies announce the coming of the circus and make plans for "the biggest sideshow in America." Don't miss the story in The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican.

LAWRENCE—

REVOLT IN THE DESERT
"Revolt in the Desert," says Irving Brown in the Bookman for May, "is a great book, one that will stand the test of time."

Lawrence is one of those rare persons who not only seem to attract adventure and danger to themselves but can write as well. He is not only a maker of history and a man of action, but a sensitive dreamer and artist, fully articulate.

Many writers describe Lawrence as eccentric and the portion of the world that knows his history usually agrees. Almost all of us know the bare outlines of how Lawrence, an unimpressive, rather studious young man of twenty-six, single handed, organized and became the leader of the Arab revolt. Lawrence himself gives Allenby the credit for the defeat of the Turkish forces in the East, but without the Arab forces Allenby's task would have been a much more difficult one. It was Lawrence that had the vision to see that to bring the Arab tribes together a prophet as well as a man possessing the qualities of a leader was needed. It was Lawrence that chose Faisal as this leader and made him a king, of what happened afterwards the book does not tell, but it must have been bitter for Lawrence to see his work going for naught. Perhaps this is one reason for his reticence since the war. Since then he has allowed very little to be known of himself. He even enlisted under an assumed name in the Royal Air Force and has been recently serving as a private soldier in the British Army. But whether Lawrence is eccentric or not, we must all agree that he is something of a genius.

What he does in this book of his is to bring home to us what that war in the East was. We enter into the intrigue and see the hand-to-hand fighting at close range. It was war under a romantic conditions as could be imagined. The very place names have romance in them. The Arabian Nights and Lawrence's book give the same thrill. But this young man is more than a soldier, he is a psychologist and an artist as well. His character pictures of the Arab leader are clear cut and convincing. Faisal, the leader and Auda the warrior stand out. But his pictures of the desert and sky, the council tent and starry night rides are just as vigorous and as well drawn.

The chief value of the book is its power of enabling the reader to live even as Lawrence has, a rich full life. There is realism and romance in the pages, heights and depths, savagery and heroism. Many will read it today out of curiosity or as a historical document, but a hundred years from now it will be read and enjoyed as a work of art.

APPLIANCES FROM DAYTON AIR FIELD USED BY LINDBERGH

DAYTON, O., May 26.—McCook Field officials today observed that several appliances used by Capt. Charles Lindbergh, when he bled through to Paris were developed there.

They expressed a great interest in the memorable hip skip and jump from San Diego, Cal., to Paris and kept in touch with all new developments from start to finish. The all metal propeller was brought out by McCook Field six months ago. It is an entirely new type and requires eight per cent less gasoline on given mileage than other propellers. The blades of aluminum alloy are fitted into a steel hub, so the pitch may be modified to meet climatic conditions. It is impervious to all damage which might be done in flying through a heavy rain storm, sleet, snow or hail.

This is the first sensational flight on which the new "prop" was used although the "good will planes" on the South American tour were similarly equipped. Other McCook Field devices which aided Lindbergh are the ground induction compass, the turn and bank indicator and the drift meter, all of which are designed to keep a pilot on his true course.

From a scientific standpoint the flight by Lindbergh is regarded as outstanding in the science of aviation. It is not yet twenty-five years of age and in the opinion of Orville Wright, who taught the world to fly, developments of the next few years will be just as astounding and just as amazing as was the one man flight to Paris.

These professional flyers at McCook Field were pulling for him all the way. Some of them knew him at Kelly Field, when he arrived there with a "battered bus" and entered the ground school. They recall the time he jumped with a parachute after a collision in mid-air and how he and the other pilot shook hands when they both landed safely.

They say his grit and determination carried him through. He flew for a definite purpose they said and complimented the Ryan one-seater and its stability.

Although the world was looking on, no one was more interested

than the man who made flying a reality—Orville Wright. Wright is a man of a few direct words only.

Today after a sober reflection of all that has come out of Paris since that "hop, skip and a jump" Wright broke all conversational records and pointing to the future predicted the fulfillment of many dreams which aviation has held for years—regular transatlantic service.

Wright is of the opinion that such service has been brought much nearer by the flight of "Lindbergh." He believes that developments now under way coupled with those of the last few years will do much to bring this about.

He is also of the opinion that development of a new fuel by which internal combustion engines of great power may be operated will be one of the determining factors in future developments. Fuel is a mighty important item on any flight. The longer the flight the more important it becomes according to aviation experts. Gasoline in large quantities must be carried. It is heavy and eats up space. It was explained and Mr. Wright believes that something new along this line will materially aid establishment of oceanic aerial service.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

The entrance of America into the World War finds Philip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this he and Natalie Jones, who is the daughter of the Tracy's milkman, had had a childish engagement which, however, had been objected to by both Mr. Jones and Mrs. Tracy.

Philip's mother plans to interest her son in other girls and tells him of the impending visit of her old friend, Mrs. Hilliard. He goes to the station to meet her and takes her to luncheon and shortly finds he is falling in love at first sight.

On a midnight ride she confesses her love to Philip. The whole affair sinks into nothingness because war is declared. Rod and Philip are the first to enlist.

Lyra writes a cruel letter to Philip and leaves without seeing either him or his mother. Natalie accuses Mrs. Tracy of sending her boy to war to save him from her, and Mrs. Tracy replies, "I am sending him to war, my dear, to save him, for you."

Rod and Philip start for the barracks. Natalie goes to the wrong depot to see them off and in her anxiety to see Phil she ignores Rod entirely.

Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XXV

"LEAVE ME ALONE, DAMN YOU!" THERE was a crunching of brakes and before the taxi had hardly come to a halt, a girl, like a streak of gold from hair to yellow shoed feet, appeared on the running board in the sudden glow of the street lamp under which the car had stopped.

"It's Natalie," shouted Rod as he darted forward.

"Oh, Wynne, Wynne, it's Natalie," called the girl. She seemed literally poised in the darkness, her eyes eagerly peering into the crowd. The street lamp had caught her yellow frock and the darkness had cut off its are light as she darted forward and fell her full length into the gutter.

Both boys rushed toward the taxi. It was Rod who reached her first and gropingly helped her to her feet, but Natalie did not see him. Her eyes were searching for Phil. In a moment they found him, and covered from head to feet with mud—her face spattered with it—she was hardly recognizable—she flung her arms about his neck.

"I went to the wrong station, Rod told me the wrong station," she cried as she covered Phil's mouth with muddy kisses. "Wynne, tell them to wait a minute—just a minute."

"All aboard," "Get aboard there," the sergeant tried to pull Phil toward the train, for the wheels were beginning to move.

Natalie was propelled forward, for her arms still clung to Phil's neck. At last, just before he reached the step, they weakened. Some one held her back, while Phil turned and sprang on the last step of the moving train.

"Good-bye, Natalie," he called turning his head for one last look.

He was forcibly pushed on to the platform by some one behind him. "Get up there and give me a chance to get on board," Aarin Phillips turned his head. Surely that hate-contorted face thrust up into this was not that of his friend.

"Rod, Rod," he stammered, "I didn't know you were behind me." He thrust out his hand.

It was struck down viciously. "Leave me alone, damn you!" said the voice as strange as was the face into which he was looking. "You did not give me a chance to say good-bye to Natalie, and I'll never see her again!"

Philip Tracy threw his arm about the heaving form of his friend. For a moment they clung together—just two boys alone in the great chaos that seemed to engulf the whole world.

"I didn't mean to, Rod," said Phil as he pushed his friend ahead of him into the car overflowing with nervous youth who did not know as yet what it was all about.

"I know it, I know you were not to blame, but she did not see me at all Wynne—she did not know I was there, and there was no one but her that I had in all the world."

FOR the first and last time in all his life, Philip Tracy saw Rodney Maxwell weep.

His own eyes were so full of tears that he stumbled as he and his friend pushed into a seat.

The car was filled with about fifty men, some of them singing, some swearing and some sitting like wax figures, unseeing, unheeding anything that was going on about them.

To vociferous inquiries they were told they would get to the barracks in about two hours and a half.

Phil looked at Rodney and found that he was one of the unseeing, unheeding ones, and he felt it would be much better if he did not wake him out of his retrospection. As casually as he could, he got up and went to the back seat of the car. Rod did not even seem to notice his departure. Here he sat down among a laughing crowd and listened for a moment to their conversation.

Most of which was about what they were going to do to the Helms when they got overseas.

Finally he found that his attention was going back to that silent figure sitting so straight in its seat in the front of the car. He walked over to Rod.

At the touch of Phil's hand on his shoulder, Rodney Maxwell started and half rose. Phil found to his relief that he had forgotten all his rage and was now unhappy because the girl he loved so devotedly had now on it's own and me. It looks as though we were entering another world."

Rodney Maxwell said nothing, but as he looked at him, Philip found that the face of the ugly stranger had gone, and in its place was again the affable smile that he had always seen upon the countenance of old Rod—Rod he seemed to have known always—the Rod upon whose utter loyalty and love he had always relied and never been betrayed.

"We'll be at the barracks in about three hours," he observed, as though nothing had happened between them to break for the first time their complete understanding—they were pals again.

The car was full of bubbling excitement. Every youthful recruit in America could end the war immediately.

A war to end war—and other phrases and slogans were bandied about from lip to lip of the young crusaders. For whatever might be the mingled reasons of those who do not want to be drafted into the army, the first contingents or those who signed up in the first flush of patriotic excitement were thrilled with the fact that they represented what America believed to be right, as well as America's might.

All at once there seemed to be a hush in the hightlighted conversation. With a sigh Phil realized that he was inexplicably tired. He looked again at Rod and found his eyes were closed. He stretched himself out a little and tried to think over the events of the exciting day.

He did not know he had closed his eyes, until he was awakened by the men filing out of the car.

They were hustled into tents and unrolling blankets, were gruffly told to stretch themselves out on cots. In the bustle of getting settled, Phil and Rod were separated, and Phil thinking it would be just as well for them to be parted for a few hours, or until they had both adjusted themselves, turned over and tried to sleep.

HOW long he had lain there he did not know, but it seemed ages. He told himself that he was the only man that was awake in the whole sleeping tent, as he turned and twisted and could find no peace for his restlessness.

As his face came into contact with the coarse blanket, he thought by contrast of Lyra Hilliard's soft cheek as he had felt it against his. Finally he could stand it no longer and carefully stepped out of the tent and walked to the very end of the company street.

The rain in which they had started had ceased—a cloud here and there seemed scurrying to find its darker fellows that had already fled before the unearthly silver glow of the waiting moon. It was such a moonlight as this that turned that midnight ride with Lyra into unspeakable glory.

Molten fire began to run through his veins.

He tried to think sanely. He was ashamed that on the even of making this great sacrifice, instead of the heroic and splendid thoughts which should fill his brain, he could think of nothing but the scarlet bow of Lyra's mouth and of the opaque whiteness of her throat, just where it rounded into the beauty of her bosom.

The moon for a moment was darkened by a cloud. He turned with a sudden chill that shook him from head to foot. Some one in the tent he was passing had evidently rolled from his cot, and his laughter and derision he heard an angry voice shouting, "Oh, you go to hell, will you?"

With changing mood, he cursed not only himself for a fool, but his father before him for passing on to him the temperamental he had just found was his, and stumbling over grumbling, half-awake sleepers, he found at last his cot and sank into dreamless sleep.

Here Rod followed him the next morning after they had both turned away from breakfast of bad coffee, hunks and bread and strong butter which neither of them could eat.

"I think I'll send a little note to Mother, and I'm going to send your love to her, old man."

Rod, although he knew that the first letter Phil would write would be to Natalie, replied: "Of course you must send her my love, for she's the only mother I've known."

Then he wandered out of the tent and Phil wrote at the top of the sheet on a pad on his knees:

"Dear Natalie—

"We have slept our first night in tents. We have tried to eat an unobtainable breakfast. Rod and I. He has wandered out into the parade ground and I am going to write a few words to you and Mother."

"Do you know, Natalie dear, that you looked like a heaven sent vision to me as that rickety old taxi drove away from the barracks at the station? It was as though a lost and discouraged person had seen a rainbow of promise and had almost given up hope."

Sciatic-Neuritis

The sciatic nerve, situated at the back of the hip joint is frequently the subject of Neuritis, giving rise to the painful disease Sciatica. The symptoms are intense pains which shoot down the thigh to the foot, often aggravated by walking, and with painful points along the course of the nerve, very tender to the touch.

The trouble is a very obstinate one and does not readily respond to ordinary treatment. It takes more than the usual pain sedative even to alleviate the pain. The best way to get relief from the persistent nerve racking pains of Neuritis is to get a bottle of Alenrius Special Formula No. 2, which comes in capsule form.

Take them as directed and in about 24 hours you should be able to notice that they have considerably reduced, if not almost banished, all pain and soreness. Continue faithfully and in a reasonable time you should be able to work and rest in comfort once again. Sayre's Drug Store keeps Alenrius Special Formula No. 2 in stock all the time and sells lots of it.

Remember that Moone's Emerald Oil is a clean, powerful, penetrating Antiseptic Oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue and that it must give complete satisfaction or your money cheerfully refunded.

SEVEN KILLED WHEN GALE HITS NORFOLK

Baseball Czar Landis Escapes When Wind Storm Hits Ball Park—Wide-spread Property Damage Caused By Wind

NORFOLK, Va., May 26.—Seven persons were dead today and widespread property damage caused by a sudden tornado-like gale which whirled up suddenly late yesterday and destroyed part of the Norfolk ball park, where the Norfolk and Portsmouth teams were playing.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, in the ball park at the time, had a narrow escape. He said it was the worst storm he had ever seen.

A. N. McWilliams, a middle-aged spectator at the game, was killed by a crashing timber, and H. C. Everhart, president of the Norfolk Amusement Company, died later from injuries. The others killed were negro workmen in a warehouse a short distance from the park.

Several score were given first aid treatment at hospitals for minor injuries.

"It looked like an ordinary little dust storm when it started," said Judge Landis, "but there was a real tornado behind it."

WILE SAYS:

Air Mail Happy
Will Roy Blow?
Honor Bingham
Washington Notes

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927
WASHINGTON, May 26.—Lindbergh's thrilling feat arouses nowhere more joyful enthusiasm than in the United States Air Mail Service, for it was there that he served his flying apprenticeship. Flying with the mails is, of course, not accompanied by the dangers or risks necessary in training men for military and naval aviation. But the air mail does call for a degree of precision and conservatism that "Lucky" Lindbergh put into triumphant practice in preparing for and accomplishing his epoch-making hop across the Atlantic. W. Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster general, in charge of the air mail service, proudly calls attention to its most recent achievements. For that portion of the fiscal year 1927 from July 1, 1926 to April 22, 1927 postal pilots flew a total of 2,158,623 miles. On the date last mentioned the service suffered the loss of one of its gallant airmen, Jack Milazzo. His death marked the highest average of miles flown per fatal crash since the inauguration of the air mail. How the service has grown is indicated by the fact that in the fiscal year 1918 only 21,359 miles were flown, while in 1926, 2,547,992 miles were reeled off. The Post Office Department since 1918 has had only $385,000 of appropriations for the air mail, and out of that it has an inventory (value of equipment) of more than $2,000,000.

Will Haynes "Blow the Works?"
Will Major Roy A. Haynes "blow the works," now that he is no longer a prohibition official? In other words, will the darling of the Anti-Saloon League gods find

RAGING WATERS LAP AT FINAL DRY SPOT IN LOUISIANA AREA

Thousands Are Being Sheltered Now At Baton Rouge

BATON ROUGE, La., May 26.—After three days devoted to perfecting organization of the reconstruction machinery in Mississippi and Arkansas, Secretary of Commerce Hoover returned to Louisiana relief headquarters today to assume direction of the refugee concentration from the rapidly disappearing parishes of Point Coupee and West Baton Rouge.

Boats of every description bringing hundreds of flood exiles hourly to the Red Cross and national guard camps here since the opening of the East Atchafalaya Crevasse at McCrea last Saturday have made the state capital one of the largest concentration points in the flooded area of the lower valley.

More than 6,000 homeless were encamped here when Secretary Hoover arrived this morning from Little Rock. Preparations have been made for a minimum of 10,000 refugees in the Baton Rouge area. Between 4,000 and 6,000 will be cared for in the picturesque surroundings of old university campus, a mile north of the state house. Army tents for about 5,000 more are spread in a city park a mile to the west.

STUDENTS DROWN

CINCINNATI, O., May 26.—George Adams, 29, of Paris, Ky., and Roland Sellers, 23, of Kendallville, Ind., students at St. Gregory's seminary here, were drowned when their canoe overturned in Little Miami River, while they were attending the annual picnic of the school at Friars' camp, near here.

PILOT'S RECEPTION GROWS

DISABLED STEAMER IS SAFE

FRENCH WELCOME IS BEING EXTENDED TO ALL UNITED STATES

Pilot Received By Foch And Joffre—Gives Prize Back

PARIS, May 26.—The French welcome for Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, first to succeed in a New York to Paris flight, has gradually developed until today it has taken the aspects of a pro-American demonstration.

Lindbergh's modest and thoughtful conduct has done much to increase the French respect for Americans, and whereas a few days ago Americans in Paris were often times subject to leers and jeers, today they are treated in most friendly fashion. The one continuous demonstration and jubilation over Lindbergh's success is reaching a climax today, for it is Ascension Day and thousands of workers who have heretofore been unable to greet Lindbergh are having a holiday and are preparing to line the Champs Elysee and Rue de Rivoli to see his triumphal procession to the city hall where he will be given the keys of the city.

Lindbergh will ride through the streets in an open carriage, escorted by the president of the municipal council and Ambassador Herriot, with a troop of French cavalry, brilliant in dress uniforms, clattering along as an escort. Five hundred invitations have been issued for the city hall reception, but there has been a demand for hundreds more and the police anticipate huge crowds.

During the morning hours crowds gathered about the American embassy, hoping to catch a glimpse of the young aviator who has overnight become an ambassador by circumstance. Frenchmen meeting American friends before the embassy greeted them with congratulations and whenever French enthusiasm reached the point where it had to have expression the "Vive Lindbergh" was often times accompanied by "Vive L'Amerique."

At noon Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, will entertain Lindbergh with an official luncheon, at which it is expected the majority of the cabinet will be present.

Perhaps the most gracious act Lindbergh has accomplished and which has won for him even greater admiration has been his gift of 150,000 francs for a fund for the families of French aviators who have lost their lives in the promotion of the science of flying. The 150,000 francs was awarded to Lindbergh by the Aero Club of France, having been donated by Mme. Deutsche De La Meurthe for the purchase of a medal which Lindbergh promptly turned the money back, stating that he greatly appreciated the honor extended him but that it was his desire that the money be paid into the fund for the relief of those who have given their sons and husbands to the science of aviation.

Punctuality is inscribed heavily in the lexicon of this youth, for at 10:10 this morning, the appointed hour, he arrived at the home of Marshal Foch to pay his respects. Lindbergh was warmly greeted by Foch and the entire Foch family.

Marshal Foch wore his American distinguished service medal in honor of the occasion.

"I congratulate you for having shown what a young man can accomplish when he organizes what he sets out to do," said Marshal Foch.

Lindbergh observed in an aside to the correspondents that "Foch is certainly a grand old man."

After an interesting conversation with Marshal Foch, Lindbergh then went to call on "Papa" Joffre and again he was greeted not only by the field marshal but by the entire Joffre family.

"I never can forget my visit to the United States in 1917," said "Papa" Joffre, "and to have it returned by you touches me profoundly. The entire French nation is happy and proud over your success."

After his call at the Joffre home Lindbergh expressed a desire to visit Versailles alone. Honoring his request the correspondents and others accompanying Lindbergh remained in Paris while he motored to Versailles with Parmely Herrick.

OHIO RAILROAD POLICE ASK PARDON FOR "TACKS"

Governor Vic Donahey has under consideration a resolution received Wednesday from the Ohio Railroad Police Association, urging a pardon for Gifford "Tack" Latimer, Xenia, former major league baseball player, who is serving a life sentence in the Ohio Penitentiary for the murder of C. E. Mackrodt, railroad detective, here, November 26, 1924.

The association pointed out in the resolution that a position is awaiting Latimer as detective on the Pennsylvania Railroad by which company he was employed before the fatal shooting took place.

Latimer has been a model prisoner and white serving as trustee, distinguished himself by aiding prison officials during a recent attempted jail break of a number of convicts.

FLYING FOOL'S OTHER DREAM

Charles Lindbergh is not content with being the first man to fly from New York to Paris. He wants to be the first to fly from San Francisco to Australia, a distance of 6,511. He would make one stop, at Honolulu, 2,091 miles out. Map shows route.

NEW FORD MORE EXPENSIVE BUT MORE ECONOMICAL TO OPERATE

DETROIT, May 26.—Official announcement was made today of the early production of the long expected new light car designed by Henry Ford.

Exclusive news of the forthcoming new model was carried by the International News Service several weeks ago.

While specifications for the new car were not announced, the Ford Company's announcement stated that it has "speed, style, flexibility and control in traffic."

"With the new Ford we propose to continue in the light car field which we created on the same basis of quantity production we have always worked, giving high quality, low price and constant service," the announcement says.

A complete description of the new model will be given within the next few weeks, it was stated. The company will continue to manufacture parts for the present

WILL OFFER PRIZE FOR HAWAII FLIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.—James D. Dole, millionaire Hawaiian "pineapple king" today offered a prize of $25,000 to the first aviator to make a non-stop flight from the Pacific Coast to Hawaii.

A prize of $10,000 was also offered to the second aviator to make the hop.

Announcement came today from H. F. MacConaughy, vice president of a pineapple company. Dole, he said, was enroute east after authorizing the offer.

LINDBERGH IS TEE-TOTALER BUT LOVES PIE

PARIS, May 26.—Although two kinds of wine and champagne have graced the table at the many luncheons and dinners given in honor of Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, the youthful flyer has confined his drinking to mineral water and milk, and still he says he is not a prohibitionist.

Lindbergh explained his attitude on the question of alcoholic beverages today in a brief interview.

"When toasts are proposed I lift my glass and touch my lips to the wine, because I do not want to appear rude or discourteous," said Lindbergh. "I do not drink, and it is not because I am opposed to drink but merely because I have never indulged in alcoholic beverages. I have no desire to start drinking now. I just don't seem to have the taste for it. That doesn't

MANY PASSENGERS ENDANGERED WHEN VESSEL IS RAMMED

Steamer In Accident On Test Voyage Towed By Tugs

BOSTON, May 26.—Radio messages picked up here today stated that the disabled new San Francisco steamship, Malolo with 310 persons aboard was anchored fifteen miles west-southwest of Nantucket lightship with wrecking tugs prepared to tow her to New York.

The freight steamer Jacob Christensen, which crashed into the Malolo late yesterday in a fog, was reported approaching New York.

The coastguard cutter Shaw, a steam trawler and several other vessels were standing by the Malolo, which was enveloped in a heavy fog.

Temporary repairs had been made on the palatial new $7,000,000 Pacific coast liner which was on her trial run and all aboard were reported safe.

The Malolo's wireless operator stated that the giant liner had a hole punctured over the fire room and that two of her engines were disabled. Firemen had been standing in four feet of water.

The Christensen, a Norwegian freighter, with a punctured bow proceeded to New York under her own steam, with the steamship Fisher as escort.

HOLLAND DELEGATE "FALLS" FOR FRAUD

DETROIT, May 26.—J. H. Kann, The Hague, Holland, a delegate to the National Foreign Trade Council, is off $135 today because he matched pennies with two strangers.

During the game one of the strangers suggested he hold both of the other players made to assure each a fair deal.

Kann agreed. The strangers fled, going in opposite directions.

VOLUNTARY WORKS PRISONER TURNS DOWN $30,000 TO $40,000 LEGACY

CLEVELAND, O., May 26.—"I'm afraid there would be too many people telling me how to spend it," declared George Schmidbauer, 62, voluntary prisoner at Warrensville workhouse, who turned down a legacy of between $30,000 and $40,000, proceeds from the sale of land which he inherited ten years ago.

Last July, George, was sentenced to sixty days in the workhouse for vagrancy. He liked it and when his time expired, requested the superintendent to let him stay as a "volunteer."

Meanwhile, his sister, Mrs. Justina Krauss had been appointed his guardian, on the ground that he was incompetent. When the property was sold, Mrs. Krauss advertised for her missing brother.

Found, George says he prefers Warrensville in preference to either money or freedom.

Yankee Maid!

Alla Nazimova, famed Russian-born actress, is going to visit Europe again soon, and wants to go as an American citizen. She has just applied in New York for her final papers, revealing that she was born June 4, 1875.

DOCUMENTS SEIZED FROM SOVIET HOUSE BEING MADE KNOWN

Letters Concerning Activities Here Are Found In Raid

LONDON, May 26.—The British government today issued a white paper containing sixteen documents seized in Soviet house, which the foreign office stated illustrate the "hostile activities of the Soviet government and the Third International against Great Britain."

The white paper was the first shot fired in the campaign for ratification of the cabinet decision for a rupture with Russia, which is being fought out in the house of commons today.

Included in the white paper was a list of "illegal addresses for communication with the Communist parties in America, Mexico, South America, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and South Africa, which were found in the possession of Anton Miller, who resisted the police when they sought to take possession of his dispatch box."

Among other documents published in the white paper was a letter from M. Jusefovich, secretary of the revolutionary leather workers international committee, addressed to Comrade Bixby of the workers party of the United States, New York, acknowledge Bixby's letter accepting "mandate as a member of the international committee of propaganda and action of revolutionary workers."

Jusefovich instructed Bixby to render a monthly report on "the position of the left wing movement among the workers in the leather, boot, shoe, saddle and glove making trades."

"You, Comrade Bixby," said the letter, "will receive our information, letters, material and notification on decisions of outstanding questions which you will have to have to illuminate and popularize as far as possible and put into effect in America."

Jusefovich expressed approval of the decisions of the left wing conference of the boot and shoe workers held in Boston and offered congratulations on the plan to publish a paper known as "The Progressive Shoe Worker."

Jusefovich said he was interested in the establishment of the "Ord system" in the American boot and shoe industry and asked for information.

FOURTEEN DIE IN TRAIN CRASH

MADRID, May 26.—Fourteen persons are reported dead and twelve are still buried in the wreckage, following a collision between a freight train and a mail train at Pulpi, Almeria province.

Doolittle Pilots Plane In "Outside Loop" First Time

Heretofore Termed Impossible—Under Care Of Physician

DAYTON, O., May 26.—Lt. Jimmy Doolittle, army air service veteran and Schneider trophy holder, today is being hailed in aviation circles as the first pilot to accomplish the outside loop, a feat which heretofore has been termed "impossible."

While the outside loop was negotiated here at McCook Field Tuesday under the observance of Lt. J. T. Hutchinson and five field officers, news of the loop was only learned last night when inquiries were made into the physical condition of the air officer who has been under the care of a physician since his feat.

The loop, according to T. C. McMahon, head of the technical data division of McCook Field, was begun by Doolittle at an altitude of 8,000 feet. The downward arc of the loop was begun and Doolittle attained a speed of 280 miles per hour. At 2,000 feet from the earth the lower arc was successfully negotiated, the pilot still maintaining his outside position while his ship climbed the completing arc and slowed to 150 miles per hour.

The outside loop differs from the ordinary loop, in that the procedure is reversed, and the ship instead of depending upon centrifugal force for its momentum must by the power of its motor combat this force. In the ordinary loop, the airman pilots his ship so that he is always within the loop his machine described, while in the outside loop the pilot is without the described arc.

Doolittle used a Curtiss pursuit plane in his successful achievement.

According to physicians he was subject to hemorrhage of the lungs when he brought his plane to earth and his eyes were bloodshot.

Doolittle is one of the few airmen who have crossed the Andes mountains by air, and in the infancy of aviation made a one stop flight from Jacksonville, Fla., to San Diego, Cal.

After defeating several navy fliers in the 1925 Schneider trophy race at Baltimore when he attained a speed of 232 1/2 miles, Doolittle was given an honorary title of "admiral."

ASKS DELEGATES TO EXPLAIN REPORTS

WASHINGTON, May 26.—American delegates to the international economic conference at Geneva have been asked for an "explanation" of the reported conversations with Russian delegates there over trade agreements and similar matters. It was learned here today.

Secretary of State Kellogg is somewhat perturbed over the press reports that have been cabled from Geneva telling of the conversations. He wants to avoid any impression that there is anything "official" being arranged between the two governments.

The American delegation at Geneva is headed by Henry R. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, and includes business experts from various government departments.

FOLLOW NEW CLEW IN SEEKING PLANE

ST. JOHNS, N. F., May 26.—Exploration of the back country near Swift Current, Placencia Bay, is being made today as the result of the statement of H. Collins and his son that they heard a crash on the morning of May 9, followed by three explosions, which may have been the crash of Captain Nungesser's plane.

Collins said that he did not know until recently that Nungesser's plane was missing. Earlier reports had been received of a plane being heard near Swift Current on the morning of May 9.

EDITH KELLY GOULD MARRIES PRODUCER

LONDON, May 26.—Albert De Courville, theatrical producer and Edith Kelly Gould, divorced wife of Frank J. Gould, were married today at St. Martin's registry office.

De Courville left a private hospital for the wedding ceremony and returned there immediately afterward. The only witnesses were Louise Carlin, the bride's mother, and Dr. John Eyre.

"Lucky" Lindbergh, Paris Jumper, Made Caterpillar Club Four Times

cently a Buffalo parachute firm has sent gold pins with a caterpillar design to individuals whose lives have been saved with parachutes of their manufacture. The air corps is also said to have in mind an official insignia consisting of a caterpillar mounted on a mulberry leaf. It would necessarily take the form of a ring, since there is no authority for officers in the service to wear such ornaments upon their uniforms.

Present members of the club are divided between the air corps, with thirty-two; the navy, with two; marine corps, three; commercial, five; and the air mail, four.

The most spectacular, possibly, of all jumps, was that of Stephen A. McClellan at Washington. McClellan was flying a plane before the air test board at Bolling field, when, while descending from a height of 4,000 feet with the motors wide open, its wings folded back on him. The unsupported engine, which, when the plane went to pieces, was driving it at a speed of 210 miles an hour, shot earthward like a fiery meteor. McClellan, showing rare presence of mind, fought clear of the wings, wormed his way out of the cockpit, and jumped, his parachute opening as he fell. The engine, fell, blazing, into the Potomac, a great, roaring rocket. McClellan followed it by a few minutes, still retaining sufficient coolness to cut his parachute from him within fifteen feet of the water. He was hauled out of the water laughing, went to the hospital for an examination, and was out and about in a few minutes, feeling none the worse.

Major Dargue, commander of the army good-will expedition to South America, and Lieutenant Whitehead, were forced to jump when the Detroit and New York collided at Buenos Aires. Two pilots were killed in this accident.

Available records show that five foreign airmen owe their lives to parachutes. They are Pilot Officer Tentland, Captain E. R. C. Scholefield, Sergeant H. C. Steanes and W. J. Frost of the British air force, and Lieutenant Nils Soderberg of the Royal air force, Sweden.

By JOHN LEO COONTZ
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright, 1927
WASHINGTON, May 26.—"Lucky" Lindbergh, bashful six-foot Columbus of the air, who is very much in the public eye at present since flying alone from New York to Paris, has another record to his credit.

This record is little known and is incidental to membership in one of the most exclusive clubs on earth, the Caterpillar Club. For Lindbergh, despite his youthful appearance, has a thrilling record behind him. His more formal title is Charles A. Lindbergh, captain in the United States army air corps.

The Caterpillar Club is five years old. It has only forty-six members and each of the forty-six must have survived an aerial catastrophe to become a member. In other words it is composed of men who have been compelled to abandon an airplane in midair and resort to the parachute to save their lives.

Captain Lindbergh is the star member because he has performed this feat four times. That is why he is called "Lucky." Lieutenant Hunter of the army air corps, and Eugene H. Barkdale, who approached Lindbergh's record most closely, have two jumps each to their credit.

One lone woman, Mrs. Irene McFarland, a civilian flier, has the distinction of being a Caterpillar.

She leaped from her disintegrating plane at Cincinnati in July, 1925.

The origin of the Caterpillar club is shrouded in mystery. It is an interesting light on human perversity that such a club, composed of men who fly above the earth should be named after an insect which crawls upon its surface. One explanation given is that caterpillars produce the silk from which the parachutes are made. Very much like Topsy, the club sprang up almost overnight.

It originated about the time

when Lieutenant Harold R. Harris made his famous jump from the air in 1922. The records of the club in the office of the Army Air Corps at Washington indicate that members of the newspaper profession and of the parachute unit at McCook Field, Dayton, O., claim responsibility for its birth. The clearest story, according to the records, is that the club started with a discussion among two Dayton newspaper men, Morris Hutton, a reporter, and Verne Timmerman, photographer, both later killed in a plane crash, and M. H. St. Clair of the parachute unit.

It was at the time of Harris' successful jump from a plane which was falling to pieces beneath him. The discussion turned to the future success of the parachute in lessening the dangers of the sky pilot and the suggestion was made that a club be formed, composed only of men whose lives had been saved by a parachute in a forced abandonment of their planes.

The suggestion was adopted under the proposed restrictions. Daredavils who purposely drop from planes are not admitted, and members can become so only through accident. The club is not an organization. It has neither officers, constitution, nor by-laws. As it stands today it consists simply of data collected on emergency jumps with a short sketch of the circumstances and a picture of the jumper. These are mounted in the "Caterpillar Club" album. No other formality exists.

The only emblem so far suggested is a drawing of a caterpillar made by a Dayton painter on the frame of the Caterpillar club display board at McCook Field. Re-

Faulty Elimination

Should Be Corrected—Good Elimination Is Essential to Good Health.

IF you would be well, see to your elimination. Faulty kidney action permits toxic material to remain in the blood and upset the whole system. Then, one is apt to have a tired, languid feeling and, sometimes, a toxic backache or headache, and often some irregularity of secretions, such as scanty or burning passages. More and more people are acclaiming the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, in this condition. For more than forty years, Doan's have been winning favor the country over. Ask your neighbor!

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE WAY OF SAFETY.—The Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the wicked shall perish. Psalm 1:6.

CARRYING CHIVALRY TOO FAR

What with bobbed-haired bandits, lady thugs, feminine forgers, girl go-betweens, and the more deadly variety of husband killers, it might seem that woman-kind, in her new found freedom of the nineteenth amendment, had carried this business of equality with man a shade too far.

Many now admit, though perhaps with a bit of shame, that woman is at times his equal in evil endeavor as well as in good. The charge that woman-kind is hardened in her emancipation is not without grounds, and the old-fashioned chivalry grows pale and wan.

When a Maryland judge, therefore, frees a woman who pleads guilty to the embezzlement of some $20,000, solely because she is a woman, the happening is so unusual that it is sent hither and yon by telegraphic news service for the people to see and marvel at.

"I come of stock," said the judge in handing down his opinion, "that never believed in punishment of a woman until she should become so depraved that she was dangerous to the public at large."

Here is a gentleman of the old school. Here is chivalry of the kind that flourished when knighthood was at its flowerist. Here is a throwback to the happy philosophy which held all women good women just because they were women. Under its teaching, no woman might ever see the inside of a house of correction unless she became recruited to the ranks of the machine gunners.

It would be pretty, indeed, for the world to turn back once more to a code such as the Maryland judge advocates. His decision is an optimistic note in the symphony of the times—a symphony played largely with the crashing cymbals of pessimism. It is, however, a note doomed to die. Woman has gained her equality with man and as she stands in any court of the land, she must be prepared to take its findings under the same laws and the same codes that mete out justice to men.

STARTING DANGEROUS CUSTOM

When movie camera men took several reels of film at Princess Pola Negri's wedding in Paris the other day, the princess started a fad which may have far reaching effect on marriage customs of the future. Good moving picture cameras can now be obtained at about half the price of an automobile, so, in these opulent days of "two cars to every family," it is not beyond reason that every family with a marriageable girl will be able to sport a movie machine of its own.

Possessing one of these history-recording contraptions will enable one of the kid brothers to film the whole ceremony. In Princess Pola's case, exposures were taken of the bride's pail, the bride's shy blush, the merry villagers dancing on the green, and they even let so unimportant a being as the bridegroom get in on the picture to film the bride's first kiss.

All this offers seed for planting interesting speculation. Granting that the custom of taking home-made movies of every wedding springs into use, think what awful wallops can be delivered to husbandly or wifely self-esteem by hauling these films out of storage ten years or more after the ceremony. Wives who wish to torture their husbands can bring out these reels and show them in front of the neighbors. Husbands who wish to remind their better halves that they are becoming fat and are losing their girlish figures can have their innings of fiendish revenge. Fathers-in-law can be shown how funny they actually did look in spats and a morning coat, and tear-stained mother-in-law can be thrown upon the screen to be laughed at by irreverent grandchildren.

All in all, these reels would become a public menace, and might send even more distraught couples to the already groaning divorce mills. Fortunately, films are inflammable, and in case it should become necessary to destroy this vivid evidence of the one big mistake, it can be destroyed by the application of a good, dry, up-and-coming Swedish, Japanese or American match.

On the other hand, think what fun the public at large might now be having with the six-reel thriller Peggy Hopkins Joyce could have furnished had she but started this wedding film habit in that none too remote past when she first took up marriage as a career and made it her life work.

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

By Marjorie K. Rawlins
A KITCHEN FACING WEST

I LIKE a kitchen facing West,
For when my day is nearly done
And I'm in need of peace and rest,
I like to see the evening sun.

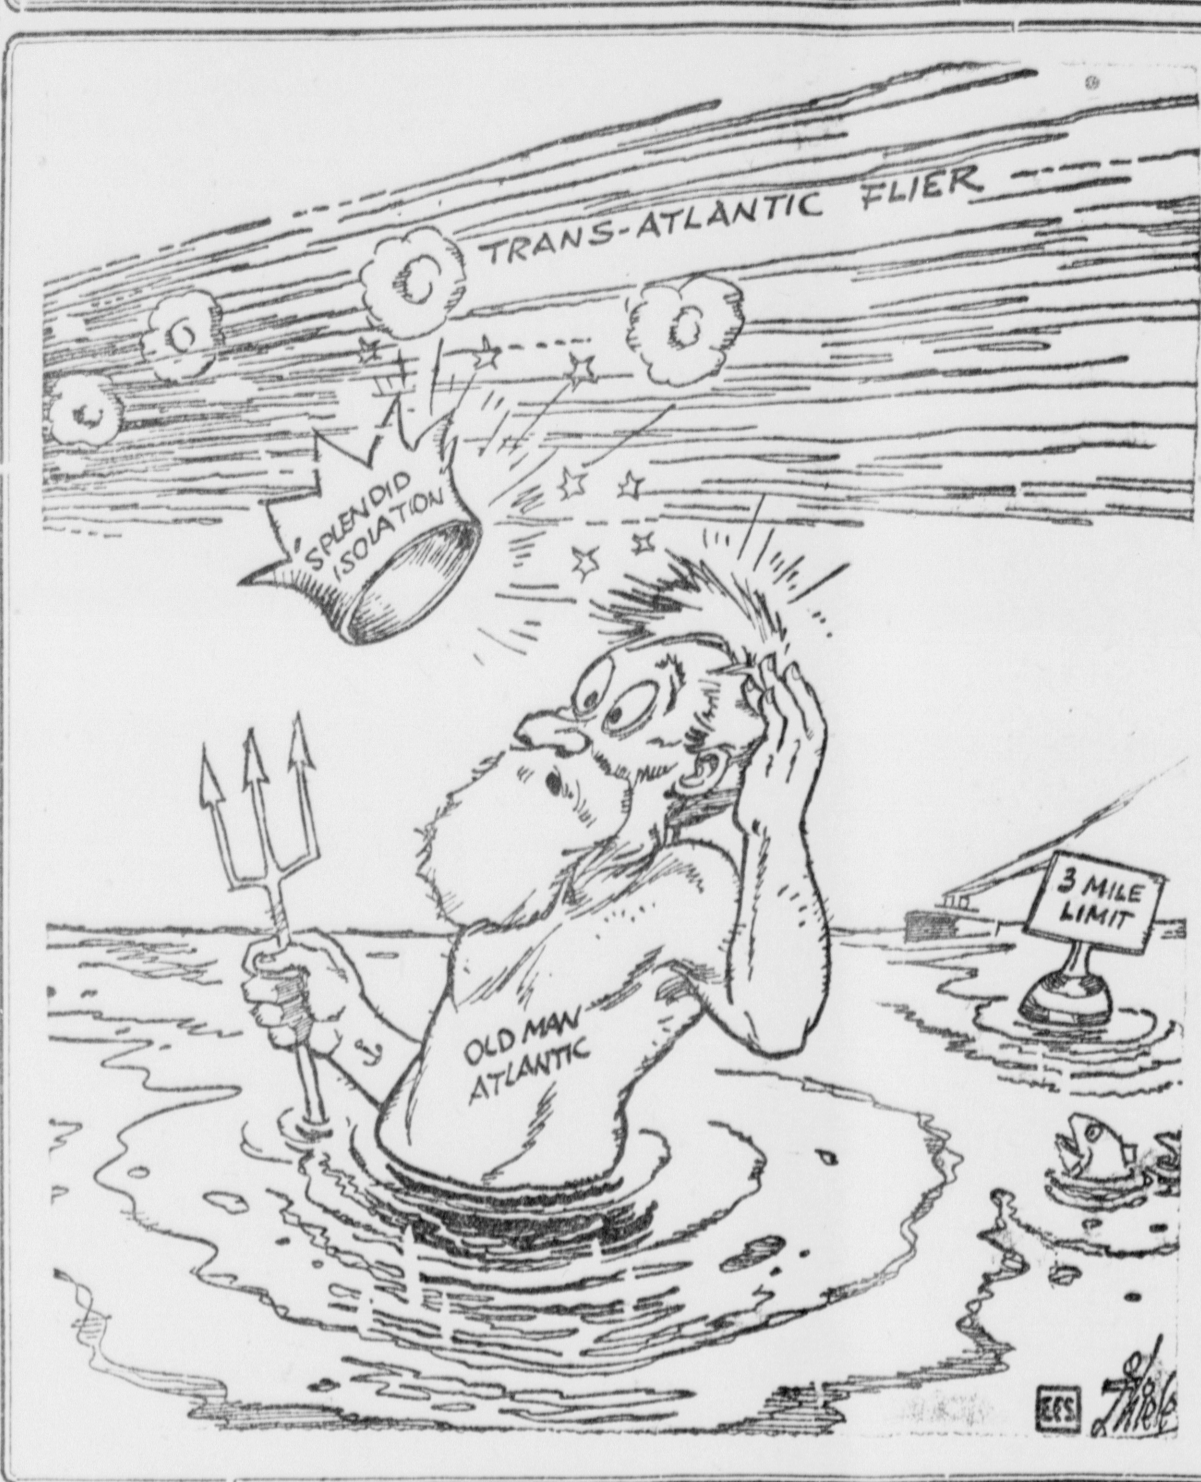

The morning finds me fresh and gay,
To song and merriment inclined.
Let kitchen then be dark and gray,
I am so blithe, I do not mind.

As hours go by and trials increase,
And as my mind grows tired and dull,
My laughter and my singing cease—
Life does not seem so beautiful.

Then through my westward windowpane
The sun streams in across my floor,
My table, in a golden rain—
And I can smile and sing once more!

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C KELLY

SHE WANTED A FUR COAT

In a restaurant last night I heard a pretty girl talk for nearly an hour, and a quarter about a fur coat.

She was telling her escort about the rare bargain she had found and though he made many futile attempts to change the topic of conversation, she stuck to that fur coat all through the meal.

Fragments of her talk that reached my near ear were something like this:

"Yes, this friend of mine is going away—cost her $350—wore it less than two months—just imagine, only $150—I do need a fur coat for next fall—don't feel that I can afford it—too wonderful a bargain to miss—"

They had gone to dinner together, presumably, for entirely different reasons. He wanted an entertaining company, and she earnestly craved that fur coat.

Perhaps each went home disappointed. At any rate, he did not take her hint, but responded mostly with polite, non-committal little grunts. She was still talking about the coat when I left the restaurant, but he was still keeping his temper, regardless of how distressed he may have been over the limited range of her table chat.

Somehow, though, I couldn't feel much sympathy for the man. Perhaps if she hadn't wanted that fur coat, she wouldn't have gone to dinner with him at all.

The truth is that all over the world women are constantly trying to talk men into doing something involving expenditure of money, and this situation has given men an exaggerated idea of their own importance. They think they are clever and superior when they are merely prosperous.

Away back, hundreds of years ago, when family life first began, women were unable, for biological reasons, to move about as far or as actively as men did. Thus men had their chance to organize the world to suit themselves. Ever since then men have had greater earning power than women—even when doing the same kind of work. Thus they have had the upper hand and an unfair advantage.

Hence, my sympathies were with the little girl in the restaurant. True, her single track conversation wasn't what I would have chosen to listen to all evening. But nevertheless, I hope she finds somebody who will loosen up and buy her that fur coat.

EXERCISES FOR RESILIENCY AND FLEXIBILITY OF THE HANDS

Aside from the softness and whiteness of the hands, and the self-administered massage which I have already spoken of, there is one more exercise which you must aim for flexibility and resiliency of the hands and learn the art of using them gracefully, if you really want beauty in all its phases.

A hand that is properly cared for and which handles itself properly, and very well, and beauty in all its phases.

The test of comparison with the naturally beautiful hand. It can really be made an important aid in winning friendship and love.

There is a world of character in a handshake. It can be one of the most magnetic things in life, and then again it can be most repelling. If your hand is warm, resilient and vibrant, you can attract people from the very first meeting. Just consider for a moment the different types of handshakes of people you know and you will appreciate more keenly

How unpleasant to take hold of a hand even for a second if it is thin and rigid and dry or the opposite, soft and flabby and moist. The ideal hand is the resilient hand which at once makes you feel that the owner is friendly, generous and frank. This type of a hand does not necessarily go with youth. A person well past middle age can still possess a warm characteristic handshake, but in order to keep the hand flexible and resilient and to attain this if you do not already possess it, you should practice hand exercises, of which the following are good examples:

Hold the hands with the fingers up in front of you and practice an imaginary five-finger exercise.

Open and close the hands rhythmically. Hold the arms out in front of you and clasp the hands, dovetailing the fingers so that they come out on the back of the hands. Stretch them and relax. Stretch the fingers of one hand apart with the fingers of the other.

After these stretching exercises, shake the hands from the wrist in as loose a manner as possible, until they feel limp all over. This is one of the best exercises I know for relaxing the hands and wrists.

Cultivate a graceful pose of the hands when they are relaxed.

One cup egg white (eight whites), fourth teaspoon salt, three-fourths teaspoon cream of tartar, one and one-fourth cup sifted granulated sugar, three-fourths teaspoon vanilla, fourth teaspoon almond extract, one cup flour (sifted four times). Beat egg white and salt on a large platter until foamy (use flat beater), add cream of tartar and continue to beat until stiff enough to stand. ## Pimples, Boils, Skin Eruptions

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils and other skin eruptions as being an indication of an abnormal condition of the system. This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of these unsightly blemishes and painful annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S. You owe it to yourself to try S.S.S. It helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished. It is time-tried and reliable.

"I suffered from impure blood," was weak, and I had lost so much weight. I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another.

I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S., which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It cleans up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy." Mrs. J. W. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

S.S.S. is made from the fresh roots of medicinal herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory.

S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

Keeping HEALTHY by Dr. A.F. Currier

MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS

Interested Reader—Will you discuss the ailment known as multiple sclerosis or hardening of nerve centers giving cause, symptoms, treatment and possibility of cure?

This is a somewhat rare chronic disease of the brain and spinal cord, the principle evidence of which consists of small, round patches of fibrous tissue disseminated over the surface of the deeper tissues of the brain and spinal cord.

It is also characterized by certain well-marked symptoms, among which is trembling or tremor. This comes on when any muscular effort is made, and stops when the effort is completed. Thus, if the purpose of the patient were to lift his hand to his mouth, he might be able to accomplish it, but the hand would be trembling all the way from the point of starting until it reached the mouth and then the trembling would stop.

Another characteristic symptom is slow, measured, indistinct speech, and a third is violent and constant oscillation of the eyeballs from side to side, which is called "nystagmus."

Other less constant symptoms are partial withering of the optic nerve with consequent impairment of vision, headache, pain in the eyeballs, dizziness, vomiting, flashes of light before the eyes, apoplexy with rigid spasm of the muscles, partial paralysis from which there may be recovery or which may progress and become complete and permanent.

There may also be unusual activity of what are known as the reflexes, in distinction from the paralysis of these reflexes which occurs in certain other diseases of the nervous system, and various disturbances of the sensibility.

The patches or plaques, which seem to be the cause of this disease are found in different portions of the brain and spinal cord, and produce pain or paralysis in certain parts of the body which are controlled by them, for example, the lower extremities of the muscles which control the action of the bladder and intestine. This disease may come suddenly or gradually, it may exist alone or it may be associated with scarlet fever, syphilis, smallpox or typhoid fever.

Not infrequently it is an occupational disease, occurring from overwork or from injury, but particularly from metallic poisoning.

by lead, mercury or copper. It may also result from exposure to cold and wet, from distillation of various kinds and from malarial poisoning.

It is a disease of early life, occurring from the twentieth to the fortieth year, but sometimes also in young children.

In some cases there are remissions and apparent recovery. If the exciting cause is removable (as in cases of metallic poisoning or poisoning from alcohol) there may be improvement.

Various powerful drugs are used by the neurologists for the relief of the more distressing symptoms, and often with considerable success; but it is not to be expected that these will do more than retard the progress of the disease.

Relief is often obtained also by systematic treatment with baths, electricity, massage, and exercises. It is always best, if possible, that such cases be under the care and direction of those who are well informed in regard to nervous diseases.

MRS. P. G. K.: My two-year-old boy is bow legged and not very strong in his legs, though strong elsewhere. I give him fruit, mostly oranges. What can I do to have his legs straightened?

Answer.—He probably has rickets, due to improper food. Give him plenty of rich milk, adding a tablespoonful of lime water to each glass, and plenty of orange juice every day. As soon as possible take him to a good orthopedic surgeon to have proper braces applied to his legs. Now is the very best time to correct this deformity.

Ask Dr. Currier that medical question that has been puzzling you. Confine your letter to fifty words and send stamped, addressed envelope for reply. He cannot, of course, make individual diagnoses, and he reserves the right to decide as to the propriety of queries.

FREQUENT RAINS HINDER CORN CROP; FRUIT DAMAGED BY FROST

Hopes for good crops of corn, fruit and other agricultural products this year are shattered by wet weather, according to J. R. Kimber, county extension agent. Continued heavy rains have dampened the spirits of farmers and every cloud in the sky adds to their troubles. With not more than one-third the corn in the ground, hopes for a good crop are being blasted by increased rains. Corn planting has been held up about two weeks on the account of wet weather and will be delayed another week if the rains continue, Mr. Kimber says. The soaked earth has not permitted the corn already planted to grow properly, he said. When planted in the fall, does not seem to have suffered any specially bad effects from the rain and is coming along encouragingly. Continued cold weather and late frosts have spelled ruin to the larger part of the cherry crop and peaches have all been practically killed, according to the extension agent. About half of the cherry crop has been salvaged from the ruin and only a fair crop of early apples will result from the bad weather.

WEDNESDAY HALF-HOLIDAYS WILL BE OBSERVED IN CITY

Xenia business houses will follow the annual custom of Wednesday afternoon holidays during June, July and August merchants are announcing.

The usual custom of circulating a petition among merchants has been abandoned, however, and merchants in each line of business will be expected to reach agreement among themselves.

Jobe Bros., Hutchison and Gibson and The J. C. Penney Co., department stores, and The McDorman-Crawford Co., The Criterion and De Mint's Toggery Shop, clothing stores, have already reached an agreement and will observe the first half-holiday next Wednesday, June 1. Other lines of business are expected to adopt similar agreements and names of merchants involved will be published later.

Merchants say the half-holiday system during the summer is designed especially for clerks whose duties confine them indoors during the hot months, and require them to work each Saturday evening.

The Chew Publishing Co., following its annual custom, will observe the half-holiday plan this year. The Evening Gazette will be issued at noon on Wednesdays during June, July and August.

One man was hurt, when a handcar carrying six men, was struck by the auto driven by Dr. R. L. Haines, Jamestown, at the Baltimore and Ohio crossing, at the edge of Jamestown, Tuesday night.

Basel Blakely, Jamestown, injured his hip when he fell in jumping from the handcar when the collision was imminent. Neither the occupants of the handcar or Dr. Haines saw one another, they said, because of an obstruction on the crossing. The handcar was derailed but no serious injuries resulted.

When the Twins a Trick do Try

Betty Ann Starts to Cry. "Right this way to see the famous magic-eating Congo man! Right this way, fellow Ritzies!"

Patsy and Betty Ann, who had been helping Marty find a nice shady place to try out the new bird house, looked up to see Rag, standing in the doorway of the carpenter shop with a black shawl wrapped around him like a magician's robe.

"Step right this way, folks, and see the famous magic-eating Congo man!" Rag called out this summons in a deep, powerful voice that sent a creep up the spines of Marty and the two girls.

What were the twins up to now? They had but recently left the yard and Marty and the girls thought they had gone off to play a game of baseball. Naturally they were surprised to find that they had been in the carpenter shop all the time and to see Rag dressed up like a magician, and calling out his creepy summons. They moved together towards the carpenter shop door.

Rag ushered them inside with a magnificent bow and pointed to three chairs that had been placed in a row in readiness for them. Stepping back towards the carpenter bench, he made another deep bow and announced, "Bimbo, the famous magic-eating Congo man!"

could expect most anything from Rag and Tag.

The wild "Congo" man waved his hand slowly over the lighted candle, muttering and growling to himself. He suddenly blew out the flame, and to the amazement of his audience, started to eat the candle.

"Stop him, Marty! Stop him!" cried Patsy. But before her brother could interfere, the savage had devoured the entire candle and stood there smiling as if nothing had happened.

"Why, Tag, you'll be sick," said the worried Betty Ann, who had at last found her breath. Then antics of the twins were almost too much for this timid member of the Ritzie club.

"Sick, nothin'," answered Rag, jauntily.

"A candle a day will keep the doctor away!"

"That's an apple," corrected Patsy. "I know you will be sick! Didn't it taste terrible? You didn't even make a face."

Marty wasn't to be taken in as easily as the girls. "Come on, fellows, tell us the trick," he said.

The twins hesitated for a minute, but finding their secret too good to keep, explained the details of their little performance to their fellow club members.

Of course the costumes had been easy. Rag had found an old shawl

As he did so, a ragged creature with a black face jumped from behind the carpenter bench.

Betty Ann screamed and Patsy watched her brother, but they were quickly quieted when Marty whispered that it was only Tag dressed up.

The "Congo" man ran about in circles, all the while mumbling and muttering to himself and screwing up his black features into all kinds of ugly positions.

Suddenly he stopped his savage dance and stood perfectly still in front of his audience. The black-cloaked magician stepped up and handed him a pink candle, served a match and lighted the candle wick.

Things were certainly getting creepy. A shawl or something had been placed over the carpenter shop window so that the light was very dim. Marty and the girls huddled closer together as they watched the movements of the black-cloaked magician and the ugly savage. Of course they knew that they were the twins, but you in the costume barrel and Tag had torn and old shirt and outgrown pair of overalls into ragged strips and blacked his face with burnt cork.

They had made the candle by cutting down a carrot and inserting a thin strip of a skinned almond as a wick. The oil in the almond burned and flared up like a regular candle flame. Of course there was no trick to eating a raw carrot.

The explanation made things so simple that Marty and the girls could hardly believe they had been so mystified.

"If you'll put on that act, we can really have the circus we've been planning," said Marty.

"Hurrah!" cried the twins. "Let's hat it Saturday afternoon."

Tomorrow the Ritzies announce the coming of the circus and make plans for "the biggest sideshow in America." Don't miss the story in The Evening Gazette and The Morning Republican.

LAWRENCE—
"Revolt in the Desert" says Irving Brown in the Bookman for May, "is a great book, one that will stand the test of time."

Lawrence is one of those rare persons who not only seem to attract adventure and danger to themselves but can write as well. He is not only a maker of history and a man of action, but a sensitive dreamer and artist, fully articulate.

Many writers describe Lawrence as eccentric and the portion of the world that knows his history usually agrees. Almost all of us know the bare outlines of how Lawrence, an unimpressive, rather studious young man of twenty-six, single handed, organized and became the leader of the Arab revolt. Lawrence himself gives Allenby the credit for the defeat of the Turkish forces in the East, but without the Arab forces Allenby's task would have been a much more difficult one. It was Lawrence that had the vision to see that to bring the Arab tribes together a prophet as well as a man possessing the qualities of a leader was needed. It was Lawrence that chose Feisal as this leader and made him a king. What happened afterwards this book does not tell, but it must have been bitter for Lawrence to see his work going for naught. Perhaps this is one reason for his reticence since the war. Since then he has allowed very little to be known of himself. He even enlisted under an assumed name in the Royal Air Force and has been recently serving as a private soldier in the British Army. But whether Lawrence is eccentric or not, we must all agree that he is something of a genius.

What he does in this book of his is to bring home to us what that war in the East was. We enter into the intrigue and see the hand-to-hand fighting at close range. It was war under as romantic conditions as could be imagined. The very place names have romance in them. The Arabian Nights and Lawrence's book give the same thrill. But this young man is more than a soldier, he is a psychologist and an artist as well. His character pictures of the Arab leader are clear cut and convincing. Feisal, the leader and Auds the warrior stand out. But the pictures of the desert and sky, the council tent and starry night rides are just as vigorous and as well drawn.

The chief value of the book is its power of enabling the reader to live even as Lawrence has, a rich full life. There is realism and romance in the pages, heights and depths, savagery and heroism. Many will read it today out of curiosity or as a historical document, but a hundred years from now it will be read and enjoyed as a work of art.

APPLIANCES FROM DAYTON AIR FIELD USED BY LINDBERGH

DAYTON, O., May 26.—McCook Field officials today observed that several appliances used by Capt. Charles Lindbergh, when he bled through to Paris were developed there.

They expressed a great interest in the memorable hop skip and jump from San Diego, Cal., to Paris and kept in touch with all news developments from start to finish. The all metal propeller was brought out at McCook Field six months ago. It is an entirely new type and requires eight per cent less gasoline on given mileage than other propellers. The blades of aluminum alloy are fitted into a steel hub, so the pitch may be modified to meet climatic conditions. It is impervious to all damage which might be done in flying through a heavy rain storm, sleet, snow or hail.

This is the first sensational flight on which the new "prop" was used although the "good wing planes" on the South American tour were similarly equipped.

Other McCook Field devices which aided Lindbergh are the ground induction compass, the turn and bank indicator and the drift meter, all of which are designed to keep a pilot on his true course.

From a scientific standpoint the flight by Lindbergh is regarded as outstanding in the science of aviation. It is not yet twenty-five years of age and in the opinion of Orville Wright, who taught the world to fly, developments of the next few years will be just as astounding and just as amazing as was the one man flight to Paris.

These professional flyers at McCook Field were pulling for him all the way. Some of them knew him at Kelly Field, when he arrived there with a "battered" bus and entered the ground school. They recall the time he jumped with parachute after a collision in mid air and how he and the other pilot shook hands when they both landed safely.

They say his grit and determination carried him through. He flew for a definite purpose they said and complimented the Ryan one-seater and its stability.

Although the world was looking on, no one was more interested

than the man who made flying a reality—Orville Wright. Wright is a man of a few direct words only.

Today after a sober reflection of all that has come out of Paris since that "hop, skip and jump" Wright broke all conversational records and pointing to the future predicted the fulfillment of many dreams which aviation has held for years—regular transatlantic service.

Wright is of the opinion that such service has been brought much nearer by the flight of "Lindbergh." He believes that developments now under way coupled with those of the last few years will do much to bring this about.

He is also of the opinion that development of a new fuel by which internal combustion engines of great power may be operated will be one of the determining factors in future developments. Fuel is a mighty important item on any flight. The longer the flight the more important it becomes according to aviation experts. Gasoline in large quantities must be carried. It is heavy and eats up space, it was explained and Mr. Wright believes that something new along this line will materially aid establishment of oceanic aerial service.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

The entrance of America into the World War finds Philip Wynne Tracy IV suffering from the collapse of his first passionate love affair. Before this he and Natalie Jones, who is the daughter of the Tracy's milkman, had had a childish engagement which, however, had been objected to by both Mr. Jones and Mrs. Tracy.

Philip's mother plans to interest her son in other girls and tells him of the impending visit of her old friend, Mrs. Hilliard. He goes to the station to meet her and takes her to luncheon and shortly finds he is falling in love at first sight.

On a midnight ride she confesses her love to Philip. The whole affair sinks into nothingness because war is declared. Rod and Philip are the first to enlist.

Lyra writes a cruel letter to Phil, lip and leaves without seeing either him or his mother. Natalie accuses Mrs. Tracy of sending her boy to war to save him from her, and Mrs. Tracy replies, "I am sending him to war, my dear, to save him for you."

Rod and Philip start for the barracks. Natalie goes to the wrong depot to see him and in her anxiety to see Phil she ignores Rod entirely.

Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XXV

"LEAVE ME ALONE, DAMN YOU!"

THERE was a crunching of brakes and before the taxi had hardly come to a halt, a girl, like a streak of gold from hair to yellow shod feet, appeared on the running board in the sudden glow of the street lamp under which the car had stopped.

"It's Natalie," shouted Rod as he darted forward.

"Oh, Wynne, Wynne, it's Natalie," called the girl. She seemed literally poised in the darkness, her eyes eagerly peering into the crowd. The street lamp had caught her yellow frock and the darkness had cut off its light as she stepped forward and fell her full length into the gutter.

Both boys rushed toward the taxi. It was Rod who reached her first and gropingly helped her to her feet, but Natalie did not see him. Her eyes were searching for Phil. In a moment they found him, and covered from head to foot with mud—her face spattered until it was hardly recognizable—she flung her arms about his neck.

"I went to the wrong station, Rod," told me the wrong station," she cried as she covered Phil's mouth with muddy kisses. "Wynne, tell them to wait a minute—just a minute."

"All aboard." "Get aboard there!" The sergeant tried to pull Phil toward the train, for the wheels were beginning to move.

Natalie was propelled forward, for her arms still clung to Phil's neck. At last, just before he reached the step, they weakened. Some one held her back, while Phil turned and sprang on the last step of the moving train.

"Good-bye, Natalie," he called turning his head for one last look. He was forcibly pushed on the platform by some one behind him. "Get up there and give me a chance to get on board." Again Phil turned his head. Surely that hate-contorted face thrust up into his was not that of his friend.

"Rod, Rod," he stammered, "I didn't know you were behind me." He thrust out his hand.

It was struck down viciously. "Leave me alone, damn you!" said a voice as strange as was the face into which he was looking. "You did not give me a chance to say good-bye to Natalie, and I'll never see her again!"

Philip Tracy threw his arm about the heaving form of his friend. For a moment they clung together—just two boys alone in the great chaos that seemed to engulf the whole world.

"I didn't mean to, Rod," said Phil as he pushed his friend ahead of him into the car overcrowded with nervous youth who did not know as yet what it was all about.

"I know it. I know you were not to blame, she did not see me at all Wynne—she did not know I was there, and there was no one but her that I had in all the world."

FOR the first and last time in all his life, Philip Tracy saw Rodney Maxwell with tears in his eyes. His own eyes were so full of tears that he stumbled as he and his friend pushed into a seat.

The car was filled with about fifty men, some of them singing, some swearing and some sitting like wax figures as he had felt it against his. Finally he could stand it no longer and carefully stepped out of the tent and walked to the very end of the company street.

The rain in which they had started had ceased—a cloud here and there seemed scurrying to find its darker fellows that had already fled before the unearthly silver glow of the waning moon. It was such a moonlight as this that turned that midnight ride with Lyra into unspeakable story.

He tried to think sanely. He was ashamed that on the even of making this great sacrifice, instead of the heroic and splendid thoughts which should fill his brain, he could think of nothing but the scarlet bow of Lyra's mouth and of the aqueous whiteness of her throat, just where it rounded into the beauty of her bosom.

The moon for a moment was darkened by a cloud. He turned with a sudden chill that shook him from head to foot. Some one in the tent he was passing had evidently rolled from his cot, for amid laughter and derision he heard an angry voice shouting, "Oh, you go to hell, will you?"

With changing mood, he cursed himself for a fool, but his father before him for passing on to him the temperament he had just found was his, and stumbling over grumbling, half-awake sleepers, he found at last his cot and sank into dreamless sleep.

He had followed him the next morning after they had both turned away from a breakfast of bad coffee, hunk and bread and strong butter which neither of them could eat.

"I think I'll send a little note to Mother, and I'm going to send your love to old man."

"We'll be at the barracks in about three hours," he observed, as though nothing had been between them to break for the first time their complete understanding—they were pals again.

The car was full of bubbling excitement. Every man in the recruit had a plan by which he knew America could end the war immediately.

A war to end war—and other phrases and slogans were bandied about from lip to lip of the young crusaders. For whatever reason the mingled reasons of those who joined or were drafted into the army later, the first contingents or those who signed up in the first flush of patriotic excitement were thrilled with the fact that they represented what America believed to be right, as well as America's might.

All at once there seemed to be a lull in the highpitched conversation. With a sigh Phil realized that he was inexplicably tired. He looked again at Rod and found his eyes were closed. He stretched himself out a little and tried to think over the events of the exciting day. He did not know he had closed his eyes, until he was awakened by the men filing out of the car.

They were hustled into tents and unrolling blankets, were gruffly told to stretch themselves out on cots.

In the bustle of getting settled, Phil and Rod were separated, and Phil thinking it would be just as well for them to be parted for a few hours, or until they had both adjusted themselves, turned over and tried to sleep.

HOW long he had lain there he did not know, but it seemed ages. He told himself that he was the only man that was awake in the whole sleeping tent, as he turned and twisted and could find no peace for his restlessness.

As his face came into contact with the coarse blanket, he thought by contrast of Lyra Hilliard's soft curves as he had felt it against his. Finally he could stand it no longer and carefully stepped out of the tent and walked to the very end of the company street.

Sciatic-Neuritis

The sciatic nerve, situated at the back of the hip joint is frequently the subject of Neuritis, giving rise to the painful disease Sciatica. The symptoms are intense pains which shoot down the thigh to the foot, often aggravated by walking and with painful points along the course of the nerve, very tender to the touch.

The trouble is a very obstinate one and does not readily respond to ordinary treatment. It takes more than the usual pain sedative even to alleviate the pain. The best way to get relief from the persistent nerve-racking pains of Neuritis is to get a bottle of Allenhrh Special Formula No. 2, which comes in capsule form.

Take them as directed and in about 24 hours you should be able to notice that they have considerably reduced, if not almost banished, all pain and soreness. Continue faithfully and in a reasonable time you should be able to work and rest in comfort once again. Sayre's Drug Store keeps Allenhrh Special Formula No. 2 in stock all the time and sells lots of it.
